Introduction

The adventures of Tintin, by the great Belgian artist Hergé, are enjoyed the world over; for the linguist, they offer the added attraction of providing tantalizing glimpses of a previously undocumented language, Syldavian.

Hergé never, to my knowledge, provided any grammatical sketch of this language, and other sources on Syldavian are precious few. I have taken the liberty of laying out the known facts on this fascinating language.

There are several ways to read this document:

- Simply to find out what the scraps of Syldavian mean. For this, simply read the Annotated Corpus, ignoring the sections in this color type.
- To grasp Syldavian as a system— phonology, orthography, morphology, syntax. For this, see the Grammar and Lexicon, again ignoring this color type.
- As a linguistic detective story: following how the scraps were deciphered, what the cognates are, how the results were assembled into a plausible, coherent whole. For this, read the sections in this color type.

Not all of my interpretations and interpolations may be correct; I don't know Dutch, which as will be seen is a requisite for this work, and I've had to rely on the help of Dutch and Belgian correspondents on the Net. Corrections are welcome (but please don't tell me about Marols; I know about it already).

The Annotated Corpus

Below I list every scrap of Syldavian found in the Tintin books. All citations are of course from the original French books. Translators occasionally made alterations in the Syldavian text— e.g. the English version gives politzski for gendarmaskaïa.

Transliterations follow the equivalents given under Orthography. Too bad html is so brain-dead about non-Roman scripts.

First, content words, phrases, and full sentences, by album; then, proper names.

Le Sceptre d'Ottokar (1947)

5 szlaszeck type of meat, later said (probably deceptively) to be dog; szprädj type of red wine
5 khôr currency

6 Handwritten restaurant check: 1 Szlaszeck champ., 1 Szprädj ("1 szlaszeck with mushrooms, 1 red wine")
19 muskh glossed as valeur (valor) kar glossed as roi (king) kloho glossed as conquête (conquest) ow glossed as ville (city)
21 Eih bennek, eih blavek - motto of Syldavia: "Here I am, here I stay."
The motto is glossed in the Syldavian tourist brochure as Qui s'y frotte s'y pique— "Who rubs himself there, gets stung." This gloss however is simply the motto of Lorraine, referring to its emblem, the thistle, and must be taken as an attempt to translate the expression into French cultural terms (indeed, the brochure goes on to quote the English motto Honni soit qui mal y pense.) The true meaning can be seen from the Dutch Hier ben ik, hier blijf ik "Here I am, here I stay", almost certainly the meaning in Syldavian as well, confirmed by the use of blaveh 'stay' in a later book. Since we also have eih = 'he', it seems that 'here' and 'he' (cf. Du. hier, hij) have merged in Syldavian. On the other hand, the motto is medieval, and it is likely that in the centuries since Ottokar, some way has been found to avoid such an inconvenient homophony.

From a 14C manuscript, Noble Deeds of Ottokar IV: "Pir Ottokar, dûs pollsz ez könikstz, dan tronn eszt pho mâ." Czeillâ czäidâ ön eltcâr alpû, "Kzommetz pakkeho lapzâda." Könikstz itd o alpû klöppz : Staszrvitchz erom szûbel ö. Dâzsbick fällta öpp o cârrö.
"Father Ottokar, thou falsely art king; the throne is for me." This one said thus to the other, "Come seize the sceptre." The king thus hit him, Staszrvitch, on his head. The villain fell onto the floor."

This was the trickiest passage to decipher. I'd worked out less than half of it before coming across a translation provided by Frédéric Soumois in Dossier Tintin (1987): "'Father Ottokar, thou art then king of the city, so the throne is for me.' That one says to the other. 'Come take the sceptre.' And the king hit Staszrvitch with a blow of the sceptre, which made him fall on the floor like a nanny-goat."

I've departed from Soumois in a number of respects.

1. I've interpreted pollsz as 'wrongly' (cf. Ger. falsch), which makes better sense— if Staszrvitch were really acknowledging Ottokar's kingship, he wouldn't go on to claim the throne. (The same can be said of an alternative reading of 'king of the Poles').
2. Soumois translates alpu as 'sceptre'. (The first one could also be akpu; but the second letter doesn't match the other k's in the text). This is defensible, though he cannot supply a cognate. However, I think it reads better as a connective or intensifier, though the precise meaning is hard to pin down. The closest Dutch cognates I can find are al te 'too', aldus 'thus'.
3. I've taken lapzâda = sceptre (admittedly with no cognate) and szûbel = head from the context; possible cognates for the latter are scalp or Ger. Schopf 'forelock, tuft', or Fr. cheveux 'hair'.
4. I don't see any justification for the convoluted syntax at the end of Soumois's translation.
5. 'Nanny-goat' seems undignified for a royal chronicle. That may be the etymological meaning, but obviously the word has changed its sense.

For lapzâda a correspondent suggests Du. lap' zei hij 'slap! says he' or lap' zei de 'slap! says of (king)'. I can't see this, myself. Almost any Syldavian expression can be given such a syllable-by-syllable interpretation in Dutch; but the result won't necessarily hang together. Note that the immediate context is "Come seize —-", which doesn't segué very well into the suggested translations; and note that we already have czäidâ 'said' in this very passage.

Yves Horeau interprets ön eltcâr alpû as 'The sceptre to each one in turn', relating the first part to aan elkaar (literally 'one other'). This is plausible, but I find it an odd thing for the king to say. He also takes lapzâda as 'knocked', which is very tempting, but hard to fit with klöppz in the same sentence.

In the 1939 black and white version, the text is quite different.

Yves Horeau has undertaken the heroic task of translating it; his transliteration and translation follow:
Pir cegan caillouz rgmopz aouidzl birûzn
"The Little Father heard this callow faker of a baron say, konigzx ü szrigt daon tron es fou maat
'I have the right to be king, thus the throne is for me!' wazs ceg de xzliele coe
'What do you say, dirty cow?'
gnrufinz shakas turxz atre
'The sceptre to each in turn!'
comurr tur sblsalcomuder
'Come here, you, take my place!'
en nsocödrugt lapzszrazdzeu közoenig u zgaf se nez
And the king kit him with the sceptre on the nose, clörp op de pi etendzantecz dazs bic oms car.
the blow laying him at his feet, this goat, on the floor."

This is largely correct, in my opinion, except for a few debatable words. In this first, curiously slangy version, Hergé relied for exoticism principally on inserted odd letters (e.g. aouirdzl for a ouï) rather than diacritics.

24 Peasant, watching Milou falling from sky: Zrälùkz! "Look!"
Peasant, pointing, as Milou lands: Czesztot on klebcz! "That's a dog!" The Dutch version of this book has Czesztot on Foxsz, referring to the fact that Milou is a fox terrier.
The first word could be Zie's dat "Look at that" or 't is dat "It is that" or 't is toch "It is surely" or French c'est "That is". The meaning (here and in the next text) most clearly matches the derivation from French.
In the 1939 version, the other peasant responds, Hamaïh!... "By..."
It's not hard to identify this as the Syldavian equivalent of Bordurian amaïh "hail!", probably used here as an exclamation of surprise.
25 Peasant, discussing Tintin's arrival with his friend: Czesztot wzryzkar nietz on waghabontz! Czesztot bätczer yhzer közommetz noh dascz gendarmaskaïa? "That's surely not a tramp! Isn't it better for him to come with us to the police-station?"
In the 1939 version, some words are spelled differently: waghabont, yhzr, közommet (and there's a reversed circumflex on some of the o's).
Same peasant, to Tintin: Kzommet micz omhz, noh dascz gendarmaskaïa! "Come with us, to the police station!"
Label on police station: ГЕНДАРМАСКАИА Gendarmaskaïa.
26 On a wall we find an АДВИЧА advicza— a notice.
28 Kursaal concert hall
41 Shop sign (partially obscured): ПРАТН- ЗИГАРЕ- PRATN- ZIGARE-. "(Unknown). Cigarettes."
The first 3 (z) is written backwards, evidently a mistake, as we have it the right way in zigarettes from L'Affaire Tournesol.
42 Amaïh! In L'affaire Tournesol one hails the dictator Amaïh Plekszy-Gladz! Very likely, then, this is a Bordurian loanword.
60 Zyldav Zentral Revolutzionär Komitzät, Müsstler's organization: "Syldavian Central Revolutionary Commitee", of course.
Could this be Bordurian? Possibly; but note Bordurian zservis 'service' (from L'affaire Tournesol), vs. Syldavian zekrett. Likely zentral is Syldavian, while the Bordurian would be zsentral.
61 Szcht! - silence!

Objectif Lune (1953)

3 Zepo, abbreviation for the secret police Sign: ЮЕРХВЕН / ВЕРТЗРАГЗ Verkhwen / Wertzragh 'Work / slow down' Sign: ФОРВОТЗЕН ЗОНА Forwotzen Zona 'Forbidden zone'
5 Policeman, to Haddock who is leaving car: Hält! Ihn dzekhoujchz blaveh! "Stop! Stay in the car!"
Dzekhoujchz is written as one word, but the assigned meanings and cognates are incontrovertible: cf. Dutch koets 'coach', blijven 'stay'. Compare dzapeih and dzoeteuïh below; it's clear that the definite article can fuse with the following word in Syldavian.
Note the verb at the end, sounding very Germanic.
To Haddock, querying: Ah? Döszt? "Ah? Thirsty?"
To another policeman: On fläsz Klowaswa vüh dzapeih... Eih döszt! "A bottle of Klow water for this guy... He's thirsty!"
At first I thought vüh dzapeih was 'water bring.' Dutch speakers, however, have suggested voor daarbij 'for nearby', voor die pief 'for the dude', or voor da pei, voor de pee (Brussels dialect) 'for the guy'. I've adopted the last of these over my original guess, since it fits the context and offers a better explanation for dzapeih.
In Syldavian you don't say you 'are thirsty' but (as in French or Dutch) that you 'have thirst'. I've nonetheless identified eih with 'he', not 'he has'. I can't quite see eih as an abbreviation for hij heeft, even pronounced, as it probably is in Marols, [E: e:]— there doesn't seem to be enough trace of the verb; and I hate to see Syldavian littered with inexplicable abbreviations anyway. I suspect that 'has' is virtually undetectable after 'he' and is omitted— compare 'you' and 'you're' in non-rhotic dialects of English.
6 Driver, to Haddock, explaining why a helicopter is blocking their route: Kontzroll, Monzieu.
Monzieu is probably just monsieur in a Syldavian accent. "Checkpoint, zir."
Policeman to agent inside car: Güdd.. Zrädjzmo... Zsálu endzoekhoszd... "Good... Keep driving... See you later."
My first guess for endzoekhoszd was 'quickly' (Du. inderhaast). The Dutch speakers prefer to read it as Salut en de kost, meaning (idiomatically) "see you later". This doesn't seem like what a policeman would say, but it's the best we have.
Sign: ШАЛТ Halt! We have this as Hält in Sceptre.
Hergé uses the Cyrillic letter Ш sh for H— an odd choice, especially when Syldavian has a sh sound (sz). But Cyrillic doesn't have an h, and Hergé may have figured we wouldn't check up on him.
Yet another agent, to driver: Güdd! ...Zrädjzmo!... Zsoe ghounh dzoeteuïh ebb touhn...
"Good!... Keep driving!... They're going to open the doors."
For the first part, suggestions include Goed [zo]... Rijdt u maar "All right, carry on.", or Da's mooi "That's nice." I'm uncomfortable with explanations that insert word boundaries at will, but the link to rijden is irresistible. An unexpected clue comes from the Arumbaya in Tintin et les Picaros, also based on Dutch: Fretmô 'Just eat!'; cf. Du. Vret maar. -mo seems to act as an intensifying clitic in both Arumbaya and Syldavian.
For the rest, the best suggestion is Ze gaan de deur opendoen "They're going to open the door." (Note deur is common gender; and 'to open' is openen, opendoen, or opengaan in Dutch.)
The driver replies Güdd! "Good!"
12 Zekrett Politzs - secret police

L'Affaire Tournesol (1956)

15 Pack of cigarettes: МАЗЕДОНИА ЛОЗКТЕХ /-ИХ СЗТОУМПЕХ Mazedonia, lozktekh, —ikh sztoumpekh, 20 zigarettes- Dropped by a guy in a grey trenchcoat, who turns out to be Bordurian. I've taken it as Syldavian, however, because the Bordurians, as can be seen from the street scenes in this album, use the Latin alphabet exclusively. This particular Bordurian spy must have a taste for the enemy's cigs.
The meaning of lozktekh and sztoumpekh is uncertain. The latter may be related to Dutch stomen

'smoke, steam' or to stoemp 'cigarette butt'. The first may be related to Ger. lustig 'merry'; from the context I'd suggest the Syldavian meaning 'pleasant'.
30 Syldavian agent, taking Tournesol to the water: Rapp! Noh dzem bûthsz! "Quick! To the boat!"

Proper names

Persons: Sporowitch (SO 5), Kroïszvitch (SO 6), Schzlozitch (SO 18), Hveghi, Muskar (SO 19); Almazout, Ottokar, Staszrvich (SO 21); Trovik, Wizskiszek, Sirov (SO 26); Sprbodj (SO 29); Kromir (SO 30); Czarlitz (SO 33); Wladimir (SO 39); Müsstler (SO 42); Kaviarovitch (SO 60); Stany, Boldov (AT 41)

A Grammar of Syldavian

This section necessarily involves more interpretation, although I've based everything as closely as possible on phrases from the corpus. I've not hesitated to fill in details when it seemed advisable; words unattested in the Tintin oeuvre are marked in blue.

Genetic affiliation

Many have assumed, from its phonology, that Syldavian is a Slavic language. And of course the first king of Syldavia, Muskar, was a Slav. But history tells of many nations whose people and whose sovereign do not (or did not originally) share the same language.

If one looks for cognates with other European languages, putting aside international words and proper names, the results are striking:

Syldavian	Dutch	German	Russian
bätczer	beter	besser	luchshe	better
blaveh	blijven	bleiben	udyerzhivat'	stay
bûthsz	boot	Boot	lyotka	boat
dascz	de	das		the
döszt	dorst	Durst	zhazhda	thirst
fläsz	fles	Flasche	flyaga	bottle
forwotzen	verbieden	verboten	zapreshchat'	forbidden
güdd	goed	gut	dobryy	good
eih	hij	er	on	he
ek	ik	ich	ya	I
ihn	in	in	v	in
kar	koning	König	korol'	king
khoujchz	koets	Kutsche	karyeta	coach
kzommet	komen	kommen	prittí	come micz	met	mit	s	with
muskh	moed	Mut	muzhestvo	courage
nietz	niet	nein	nye	not
omhz	ons	uns	nas	us

wertzragh	vertragen	verspäten	zamyedlyat'	slow down
werkhven	werken	Werken	rabotat'	work

The evidence is clear: Syldavian is of Germanic stock, not Slavic; there are no cases (apart from proper names) where there is a Slavic but no Germanic cognate.

Naturally, Slavic influence on the language is significant, both because the Syldavian nobility was Slavic, and because of its geographical location. Proper names in Syldavia, for instance, are normally Slavic; and there is some evidence for a Slavic influence on syntax.

Though Syldavia is in the Balkans, Syldavian forms are usually closer to Dutch than to German (cf. güdd, nietz, wertzragh above). Extratextually the reason is simple: when he needed foreign words, Hergé regularly used Marols, the Brussels Flemish dialect his grandmother spoke. (Another example is the Arabian city of Wadesdah— "What is that" in Marols; and see the Arumbaya in L'oreille cassée.)

Some readers conclude that Syldavian "is" Marols, but this is an exaggeration. Take a closer look at the cognate list above; eih, fläsz, forwotzen, muskh, and micz are closer to German than to Dutch. Note also the plethora of forms of 'the'— dascz, dze, dzem, dza, dzoe— indicating an article declined by case and gender, as in German; the Dutch article has just two forms, and does not decline by case. There are also clear imports from French, such as czesztot, klebcz, gendarmaskaïa, adwicza, zrälùkz.

Phonology

Syldavian has a rich inventory of consonants. In the usual transliteration:

	lab	dent	alv	velar	uvular
stop	b p	t d		k g
fricative	f w	s z	sz zs	kh gh	h
affricate		tz dz	cz dj
nasal	m	n
lateral		l
approximant	v	r	rz
semivowel			j

Most of these sounds exist in English; only the spelling (on which more below) is unusual to English-speakers.

sz and zs are the alveolar fricatives ʃ ʒ spelled sh and zh in English. The related affricates cz (also spelled tcz or tch) and dj are pronounced like English ch, j. Some linguists would count kz, pronounced [ks], as a separate phoneme.

tz is pronounced /ts/, and dz is simply the voiced equivalent.

I've taken the interpretation of zs from Hungarian, which spells this sound in this way. Sz and cz are interpreted as in Polish; such spellings were common in eastern Europe, as witness the word Czech. The spelling -tch (Sporowitch), imitating the Slavic patronymic (Ivanovich), is obviously taken from French; as we only see tch in proper names we can assume it is an orthographic variant — that's the nice way of saying that Hergé should have been consistent and written Sporowicz. tcz is attested only in bätczer; as a t doesn't change the sound of a cz, this is best interpreted as a another spelling variant— or perhaps indicates a doubled consonant.

How do we interpret khoujchz? The Dutch equivalent koets suggests only that some affricate is involved. chz can surely not be the same as tz; more likely (given that we've already seen the variant tch) it's yet another form of cz.

kh (sometimes spelled ch) is pronounced like the German ch in Bach. The voiced equivalent is gh.

The voiced gh /ɣ/ is not that common in European languages— it's common in Turkic ones— but is clearly suggested by the Dutch model; e.g. vagebond is pronounced [vaɣebont]. The coexistence of such words as ghounh, güdd suggests that in Syldavian, unlike Dutch, /g/ and /ɣ/ contrast.

In older Syldavian we find c used for /k/: eltcâr, cârrö. We don't see this in modern words, and I suspect k is now used, at least for words perceived as native.

As in the Slavic languages, one must be careful to pronounce the dental phonemes against the teeth. Thus s and sz, tz and cz contrast much more strongly than they do in English. The l is always clear, as in 'light', even at the end of the word— never dark, as in 'tale'.

The r is a flap, as in Spanish, Italian, or Japanese, never a uvular fricative as in French or German, or a retroflex approximant like the American r. The rz is the same palatalized r found in Polish (rz) or Czech (Dvorak); to American ears it sounds something like rsh.

Confusingly, w is /v/, as in 'avid', while v is a bilabial approximant /β/, as in continental Spanish lavar.

The phonemes w and v are something of a puzzle. From the word Klow, which is given in both alphabets, we see that w corresponds to Cyrillic B, which is /v/ in all Slavic languages; compare also loan-words like Wladimir, and the pronunciation of w in German and Polish. Nonetheless we see v used as well, in such words as Hveghi. The key to this mystery is provided by the word ЮЕРХВЕН 'works', cognate to German Werken, for which Hergé does not provide a transliteration. Thinking of Russian words like soyuz, we may be tempted to read /yuerxven/; but I believe this is misreading the usage of the letter yu in Russian, where it marks not y + u but a form of /u/, specifically, any /u/ following a palatalized consonant. Palatalization is not important in Syldavian, but 'a form of u' is the key point. The best interpretation of the facts is that Syldavian Ю is a bilabial approximant /β/, as in continental Spanish lavar, and should be identified with the v seen in transliterated Syldavian. After a consonant, as in Hveghi, it is likely that v becomes an approximant: [hweɣi]. Note that Dutch has the same /v/ vs. /β/ distinction, but the opposite orthography: v, w.

In two words (bûthsz, Zmylpathes) we see a digraph th; I take this as an orthographic variant for t, as in French or German. In the second case the spelling is obviously suggested by the 'Carpathian' range. There's no good explanation for the th in bûthsz; but equally no reason for a fricative in this word. The only Germanic languages with a fricative th are English and Icelandic, and the cognate lists make it clear that Syldavian follows the other Germanic languages (cf. döszt, dze vs 'thirst, the') rather than these.

The vowels are:

	front	mid	back
high	i,y ü		u û
mid	e ö		o ô
low		ä a

The phonetic realization of the front vowels is clear: as in French and German, i and e exist in both unrounded and rounded variants. The interpretation of ä is unclear: it may be a rounded form of a, or a fronted [æ] as in 'ask', or it may represent [ɛ], as in German.

It's also unclear how û and ô are pronounced, especially as they appear in only one word each (bûthsz, khôr). I suggest û = u as in put; ô = open o as in caught.

We also see a few uses of ou, oe, y. The first can be taken as a diphthong, and the second as a variation of ö. I've taken y as a high lax vowel, the /ɪ/ of 'pin', but it may simply be an orthographic variant of i.

The plethora of diacritics and alternate spellings are really a flaw in Hergé's invention. He would have done well to sit down and decide on the sounds of Syldavian once and for all, then stick to them. The lack of systematicity may only bother a linguist; but there is an artistic problem as well: the reader can have no idea how to pronounce the language consistently.

Orthography

In medieval times the Syldavians apparently wrote their (Germanic) language using the Roman alphabet (see for instance the 14th century manuscript shown in Le sceptre d'Ottokar). To this day the coat of arms of Syldavia shows the motto Eih bennek, eih blavek in Latin characters (to be precise, in what is called in English black-letter script, and in German Fraktur).

In the present day, Syldavians write their language using the Cyrillic alphabet. When the changeover occurred and why cannot be determined.

Here are the Syldavian consonants in the Roman and Cyrillic alphabets:

b	p	б	п		t	d	т	д					k	g	к	г
f	w	ф	в		s	z	с	з		sz	zs	сз	зс	kh	gh	х	гз	h	щ
					tz	dz	тз	дз		cz	dj	ч	дч
m		м			n			н
					l			л		rz			рз
w		ю			r			р		j			й

In some cases (cz, tz) digraphs are used instead of the single letters used in Cyrillic. We can only assume that the Roman alphabet was used first in Syldavia, and that the Cyrillic spellings were based on it.

I've had to supply a few equivalents here, for sounds Hergé gives only in the Roman alphabet. The use of ЗС follows Hergé's model— the Syldavians presumably had their reasons for not using Cyrillic Ш sha and Ж zhe. Finally gz is suggested as the transliteration of gh; this both provides a missing equivalent and produces a neater pronunciation for the word wertzragh.

Parts of Speech

Nouns

Nouns are either of common or neuter gender. Most nouns, including most of those referring to persons or animals, are of common gender.

Plurals: -es (zigarettes, Zmyhlpathes) and -en (verkhwen) are both seen.

- Common words normally pluralize in -en: klebczen 'dogs', khôren 'khôrs', fläszen 'bottles', verkhwen 'works'.
- Loanwords generally pluralize in -es: zigarettes 'cigarettes', komitzätes 'committees'.

The chief reason for postulating two genders in Syldavian is the multiple forms of 'the'.

Pronouns

	subject	object	possessive
1s I	ek	ma	mejn
2s thou	dûs	da	dejn
3s he	eih	itd	yhzer
3s she	zsoe	irz	yhzer
1p	vei	ohmz	ohmz
2p
3p	zsoe	khon	khon

Subject forms are used, naturally, for the subject of a sentence:

Eih döszt. He's thirsty.
Ek nietz itd werlagh. I don't want it.

Object forms are used for the object of a verb or after a preposition.

Wladimir irz löwt. Wladimir loves her.
Kzommet micz omhz. Come with us.

The deictic pronouns are czei 'this', tot 'that':

Eih czei klebcz klöppta. He hit this dog.
Tot eszt on döszt waghabontz. This is a thirsty tramp.
Tintin noh czei bûthsz kzommet. Tintin is coming to this boat.
Hadok öpp tot bûthsz fällta. Haddock fell off that boat.

Other known pronouns are eihn 'here', daren 'there', eltkar 'another (person)'.

Articles

The indefinite article is on.

on klebcz a dog
on fläsz Klowaswa a bottle of Klow water

The plural is onegh. Note that English omits the article in this case, or uses 'some'.

onegh klebczen dogs, some dogs onegh fläszen Klowaswa [some] bottles of Klow water

The definite article is declined, as in German.

	m/f	n	pl
nom	dze	dascz	dzoe
acc	dzem	dascz	dzoe
dat	dze	dza	dzem
gen	doscz	doscz	doscz

Nominative forms are used for the subject of a sentence:

Dzebûthsz wzryzkar vertraght. The boat is surely slowing down.

Accusative forms are used for the direct object (as well as after certain prepositions):

Dzem bûthsz werlagh ek. I want the boat.

Dative forms are used for the indirect object (as well as after certain prepositions):

Ek itd dzekönikstz werkopta. I sold it to the king.

Genitive forms are used in possessive phrases:

Eih fällta öpp o kârrö doscz bûthsz. He fell on the floor of the boat.

The forms ending in a vowel attach to the following word: dascz gendarmaskaïa 'the police station', but dzoeteuïh 'the doors'.

Attested forms are:
dâzsbíck 'the nanny-goat' in the medieval chronicle; should be feminine, but seems to be neuter instead. The zs is an assimilation of the expected scz before the following voiced consonant.
noh dascz gendarmaskaïa 'to the police station' noh dzem bûthsz! 'to the boat!'; Boot is neuter in Ger. but common in Du.
ihn dzekhoujchz 'in the car'; Kutsche is fem. in German, common in Du.
vüh dzapeih 'for the guy' - logically should be common; but then it should be dze-, so I take it as neuter, otherwise unattested dzoeteuïh '[open] the doors'; deur is common in Du.

Compare German and Old Dutch:

	m	f	n	pl	O.Du.
nom	der	die	das	die	die
acc	den	die	das	die	dien
dat	dem	der	dem	den	dien
gen	des	der	des	der	des

Syldavian must have once had set of forms more like the German. It is not hard to see what has happened. Final -r was lost (-r is unstable in Syldavian; compare döszt with 'thirst', or vüh with 'for'), and final -m as well. The distinction between de and die was also lost, perhaps at the same time both affricated to dze. The fem. acc. and gen. should have been dze as well; the masculine dzem (from earlier den) and doscz (from des) were adopted by analogy, merging the two genders. With palatalization of das in the neuter, the present system was attained.

Adjectives

Adjectives precede nouns: forwotzen zona 'prohibited area'; Zekrett Politzs 'Secret Police'. They are not declined.

(Actually, there isn't sufficient evidence to tell whether adjectives ever change in form. The rules in Dutch are complex.)

Note the derivation Klow > Klowaswa. This is merely one of many adjectivizations, however; compare Zyldav 'Syldavian'.

Adjectives can be used to modify verbs (or, if you like, adverbs have the same form as the corresponding adjective):

Nadja Wladimir zekrett löwt. Nadja secretly loves Wladimir.
Dzapeih wzryzkar eszt on vaghabontz. The guy is surely a tramp.

Verbs: Conjugation

Attested forms:
bennek - am (with cliticized pronoun) blavek - 1s present indicative (with cliticized pronoun) ghounh - 3p present indicative forwotzen - past participle kzömmetz - (Czesztot bätczer yhzer kzömmetz noh dascz gendarmaskaïa?) infinitive ("better for him to come...") or 3s subjunctive ("better that he come...") kzommetz - imperative (to 1 person) touhn - infinitive wertzragh - generalized command, possibly in infinitive kzömmet - imperative, T or V form (to 1 person). V form = stem + -t in Dutch! hält - imperative, T or V form (to 1 person) zrälùkz - imperative, T or V form (to 1 person) blaveh - imperative, T or V form (to 1 person) zrädjzmo - imperative, T or V form (to 1 person) ez - art (2p pres. indic. of 'be') eszt - is (3s pres. indic. of 'be') czäídâ - said (3s past indic.)
pakkeho - seize (infinitive) klöppz - knocks (3s pres. indic.)
fällta - fell (3s past indic.).

Verbs are either weak or strong. The strong conjugation can be taken as follows:

Infinitive blavn 'stay'
Present indicative 1s blav, 3s blavet, 1p/3p blaven
Past indicative s blev, pl bleven
Subjunctive s blavetz, pl blavendz
Imperative 2s blaveh, 2p blavet
Participles pres blavendz, past bleven

And the weak:

Infinitive löwn 'love'
Present indicative 1s löw, 3s löwt, 1p/3p löwen
Past indicative s löwda, pl löwenda
Subjunctive s löwetz, pl löwendz
Imperative 2s löweh, 2p löwet
Participles pres löwendz, past löwen

The differences are in the past tense (formed by alternation of the root for strong verbs, by the addition of -da (-ta after an unvoiced consonant) for weak ones) and in the past participle (which for strong verbs shares the same vowel alternation as the past tense).

There isn't any evidence on which to base 2nd person forms— indeed, we don't even know whether medieval dûs 'thou' survives. I suggest using the 1s/1p forms.

Prepositions

Known prepositions:

ihn in micz with noh to o at, about öpp up, off vüh for

Interestingly, prepositions become postpositions with 3s pronouns, using the special form er; thus:

erom 'at or against him/her', ervüh 'for him or her', etc.

Prepositions generally take the dative, except where movement is implied, when the accusative is used. Thus there is a difference in meaning between ihn dzekhoujchz (dat.) (something takes place) in the car ihn dzem khoujchz (acc.) (something moves) into the car

As a corollary, some prepositions are used with only one case: e.g. noh, which always expresses movement, always takes the accusative; while o, which never does, is always followed by the dative.

I base this description on German, since Dutch (including Marols!) lacks the declined definite article. It's consistent with the prepositional phrases found in the Corpus (see Articles).

Syntax

The verb normally follows the object:

> Ihn dzekhoujchz blaveh! In the car stay!
> Ek mejn mädjek löw. I love my girlfriend.
> On sprädj werlagh. I want some wine.

Where there's an auxiliary and a main verb, the verb remains at the end, and the auxiliary moves just after the subject:

> Zsoe ghounh dzoeteuïh ebb touhn. They're going to open the doors.
> Ek werlagh ihn Klow blavn. I want to stay in Klow.

In earlier Syldavian the pronoun may follow the verb, and this form may still be used for emphasis:

> Eih bennek, eih blavek Here I am, here I stay. [medieval spelling] > Wzryzkar kzomme ek! I'm coming, for sure!

You can say either Eihn ben ek or Ek ben eihn, but never Eihn ek ben* (unlike English, where you can say 'Here I am'). In general "X is Y" can be inverted to "Y is X". When X is a pronoun, the inversion adds some emphasis: Güdd eszt itd, 'Good it is.'

In the kzommet sentences in the corpus, prepositional phrases follow the verb. The comma, however, is a signal that the prepositional phrase has been moved for emphasis, or because it is an afterthought:

> Kzommet micz omhz, noh dascz gendarmaskaïa! Come with us to the police station!

Forms of 'be' directly follow the subject :

> Könikstz eszt güdd. The king is good.
> Sbrodj eszt on forwotzen zona. Sbrodj is a forbidden zone.
> Dan dzetronn eszt ervüh. Then the throne is for him.

The merged form czesztot 'it is, that is' begins a sentence: Czesztot Tintin. "That's Tintin."

Negatives

To negate a sentence, the particle nietz is placed after the subject, in auxiliary position.

> Müsstler nietz dzem könikstz löwt. Müsstler does not love the king.

In copulative sentences, nietz is placed after the verb (or czesztot) :

> Müsstler eszt nietz güdd. Müsstler is not good.
> Czesztot wzryzkar nietz on waghabontz! That's surely not a vagabond!

Questions

Simple questions are normally indicated simply by a rising inflection:

> Dzekönikstz het döszt? Is the king thirsty?
> On klebcz fällt? Is a dog falling?

If there is an auxiliary, or a verb accompanied only by a subject, it may instead be inverted with the subject:

> Ben ek eihn? Blav ek eihn? Am I here? Do I stay here?
> Ghounh Tintin noh Sbrodj kzömmen? Is Tintin going to come to Sbrodj?

The one known interrogative pronoun is vazs 'what':

> Vazs eszt tot? What is that?

Lexicon

For strong verbs, the past participle is given after the main entry.

Hello , I researched Syldavian and found HergÃ© was influenced by his grandmother's use of Marols, plus some Hungarian and some Czech.
I want to learn Marols, but I found out there are 3 or more varieties in Brussels.
I'd like to learn the correct one, and I need a guide book for complete beginner.

I think you are unlikely to come across a language course in Marollian, although there might be an academic linguistics paper on it, so try a university library perhaps.

However, I have just come across a reference to a book called Kuifje: Een Brussels Ketje, by Daniel Justens and Alain Preaux, published by Casterman [ISBN: 978-9-03032-738-7]; it is (apparently - I have no personal knowledge of the book) a guide to all the Brussels references and in-jokes in the albums, and that includes things like the Arumbaya language, so the Syldavian may be explained in terms of Marollian. It might be what you are after, although it is in Flemish...

There's also a French/Marollian dictionary published in 1988 ("Dictionnaire Marollien-Francais Francais-Marollien" - Oscar Starck - ISBN-10: 2872630074 / ISBN-13: 978-2872630073). I just did searches at abe books and antiqbook where there were a couple for sale.

Another good way to learn would be to buy a Tintin book in Marollian. I know at least one has been translated fairly recently, but I can't remember which. Actually, I've found reading Tintin in another language is a very useful learning tool.

Marollian is based on Brussels Flemish, with Walloon French and Spanish influences.

I think finding a course will be very difficult. Apparently the language is dead, I'm afraid to say! There are small groups who meet in cafÃ©s in the Marolles, to recite stories and sing songs in the old dialect, and a puppet theatre which puts on shows in Marollian.

Dictionaries do exist, as mentioned, including Dictionnaire du Dialiecte Bruxellois, by Louis Quievreux. This book includes many of the creative insults that the Marolliens came up with, which are very amusing. Moderators: can I post any of them on this thread (all in the name of scholarship)?

In his book Brussels, a Cultural and Literary History, AndrÃ© de Vries writes that:

'Words related to food often appear in Brussels expressions, thus Ãªtre chocolat (to be at a loss); to turn someone into kipkap (to make mincemeat out of them); calichesap (vanished, literally liquorice juice. Herge uses the latter expression in The Land of Black Gold for the ruler Ben Kalish Ezab.'

Some tasty morsels there!

Thanks for the info Why do Birds. That goes some way to explaining HergÃ©'s repeated use of culinary-related names, like Bohlwinkel (confectioner's shop), Ben Mulfrid (not Marols, I know, but still mussels and chips), Ben Salaad, Ba Baoro'm, etc

Would love to hear some other examples of Marollian insults if you have any more.

OK.

Well, if you didnâ€™t like someone, you might call them a loÃ¯esenderm (bag of lice), or even afkrabsel van mettekouwskluÃ»te (scrapings of a monkeyâ€™s testicles).

If you couldnâ€™t stand someone being pretentious, you could call them a spekscheeter (baconâ€“sher).

One of the rudest things you could be called in the Marolles is, funnily enough, an â€˜architectâ€™! This can be traced back to the time that the Palais de Justice, Belgiumâ€™s main courthouse, was built during the nineteenth century by Joseph Poelaert, King Leopold IIâ€™s favourite architect. At the time it was built, the Palais de Justice was the worldâ€™s biggest building project, costing around $1 billion in todayâ€™s money.

The courthouse was built in an imposing position overlooking the Marolles, somewhat intended to intimidate the rebellious residents. A large part of the Marolles (around 3,000 houses) was demolished to make way for the building.

â€œThe architect went mad before the project could be finished, supposedly cursed by a witch from the Marolles. The term architek or schieven architek (twisted architect) became a serious term of abuse in the Marolles thereafterâ€¦â€

Just to let you know, I learned all this in the book (by AndrÃ© de Vries) I mentioned in my last post, which I would recommend to anyone who wants to know about the history of Brussels. The author also gives over a few pages to HergÃ© and Belgian comic strips/authors generally.

I would love to know enough Flemish to be able to at least try to understand the dialect. Speaking a bit of French is sadly not enough!

You don't set the bar very high when it comes to conversational gambits, do you? ;-)

Seriously, this is really interesting stuff, Why do Birds, so thank you for the info; the only bit that I'd heard before, but had forgotten, was the architek insult. I think it was in the BD-themed pocket walking-guide which you can get at the Tourist Office and comic-shops in Brussels (and in English-language as well as French and Flemish editions!).
If you have ever walked through what is left of the Marolles (it is very picturesque, now gentrified, and there are some lovely shops and squares), you can see why: the Palais is just massive, and sitting on what amounts to a ledge looming over the houses now situated at the bottom of a masonry cliff.
To be fair, the Palais de Justice is quite a remarkable structure in its own right, even when only seen from the train as you enter the city, but more so close to. I don't have the guide to hand at the moment to furnish their names, but the building has been a great favourite with B.D. artists, and features in several albums.

But I would have been pretty annoyed with it going up if I lived below (or worse, in the bit they flattened...).

A visit to the puppet theatre is something I have always meant to do, so you have given me a reminder of that. Sadly my Dutch only runs to buying trying train tickets, food, and the odd drink when actually talking, but I can sort of follow conversations, and Flemish is about the same; still I wouldn't be up to following dialect...! Good luck if you try to learn it!

Heh heh, thanks for that! Rather similar to the English bullsher, also often used for a conceited person. Dutch is similar to English in a lot of ways. Some of the HergÃ©-isms are easily understandable, like Wadesdah (what is that) and Bab-el-ehr (babbler).

Swear words and insults are usually the first thing I learn in a new language, so no, I like to travel fully armed! ;-)

I just came across this list of insults in 'Brusseleer', which I assume is just Brussels slang. It even mentions the author is compiling a dictionary of Brussels insults. There's 'sewage emptier', 'greasy rag' and even 'house painter' (which probably has some odd story like 'architect' behind it, no doubt.) They are quite Haddock-esque, aren't they?

As many of Tin tin Fans well aware of this site .
I want to ask that is that language information complete and prepare a person to speak Syldavian?
Is there any one who speak Syldavian?
Or any fan who adds more words, more complete grammar?
Is there any linguist Tintin fan out there who wants to work on that?
Any other site , research article or thesis?
Thank you for your time ,

Moderator Note: Welcome back, Mustafa. As you can see, your message has been moved to the thread you started before, and it would appear that the sum total of what we know about Syldavian is contained in this thread, but even more so on the Zompist web-site, which you know about already. It looks like a quite thorough summation of the situation (provided you only need to speak about, cars, goats and sceptres, that is!).
The Tintinologist Team

Hello again,
I have bought book French/Marollian dictionary published in 1988 ("Dictionnaire Marollien-Francais Francais-Marollien" - Oscar Starck - ISBN-10: 2872630074 / ISBN-13: 978-2872630073).
I want to create a dictionary Marollien-Turkish, Turkish-Marollien and publish at tintinologist site.
What is the best way ?
If I would be needed to write articles, I would use A,B,C class per letter and per article. It would cover 12000 words and least 55 articles. I saw tintinologist articles are very short
May be I can put everything in PDF form and load in to tintinologist server. By this way , Turkish letters wouldnt be needed to deform in to a English letters version.
Can you attach a pdf file in to the site ?
May be one of the members , read the marollien words in to a mp3 file and add grammar and sentences also.
Such a funny project.
And what is the file , word count size maximum per article if I could compress everything.
Thank you,

I think you are unlikely to come across a language course in Marollian, although there might be an academic linguistics paper on it, so try a university library perhaps.

However, I have just come across a reference to a book called Kuifje: Een Brussels Ketje, by Daniel Justens and Alain Preaux, published by Casterman [ISBN: 978-9-03032-738-7]; it is (apparently - I have no personal knowledge of the book) a guide to all the Brussels references and in-jokes in the albums, and that includes things like the Arumbaya language, so the Syldavian may be explained in terms of Marollian. It might be what you are after, although it is in Flemish...

There's also a French/Marollian dictionary published in 1988 ("Dictionnaire Marollien-Francais Francais-Marollien" - Oscar Starck - ISBN-10: 2872630074 / ISBN-13: 978-2872630073). I just did searches at abe books and antiqbook where there were a couple for sale.

Another good way to learn would be to buy a Tintin book in Marollian. I know at least one has been translated fairly recently, but I can't remember which. Actually, I've found reading Tintin in another language is a very useful learning tool.

Marollian is based on Brussels Flemish, with Walloon French and Spanish influences.

I think finding a course will be very difficult. Apparently the language is dead, I'm afraid to say! There are small groups who meet in cafÃ©s in the Marolles, to recite stories and sing songs in the old dialect, and a puppet theatre which puts on shows in Marollian.

Dictionaries do exist, as mentioned, including Dictionnaire du Dialiecte Bruxellois, by Louis Quievreux. This book includes many of the creative insults that the Marolliens came up with, which are very amusing. Moderators: can I post any of them on this thread (all in the name of scholarship)?

In his book Brussels, a Cultural and Literary History, AndrÃ© de Vries writes that:

'Words related to food often appear in Brussels expressions, thus Ãªtre chocolat (to be at a loss); to turn someone into kipkap (to make mincemeat out of them); calichesap (vanished, literally liquorice juice. Herge uses the latter expression in The Land of Black Gold for the ruler Ben Kalish Ezab.'

Some tasty morsels there!

Thanks for the info Why do Birds. That goes some way to explaining HergÃ©'s repeated use of culinary-related names, like Bohlwinkel (confectioner's shop), Ben Mulfrid (not Marols, I know, but still mussels and chips), Ben Salaad, Ba Baoro'm, etc

Would love to hear some other examples of Marollian insults if you have any more.

OK.

Well, if you didnâ€™t like someone, you might call them a loÃ¯esenderm (bag of lice), or even afkrabsel van mettekouwskluÃ»te (scrapings of a monkeyâ€™s testicles).

If you couldnâ€™t stand someone being pretentious, you could call them a spekscheeter (baconâ€“sher).

One of the rudest things you could be called in the Marolles is, funnily enough, an â€˜architectâ€™! This can be traced back to the time that the Palais de Justice, Belgiumâ€™s main courthouse, was built during the nineteenth century by Joseph Poelaert, King Leopold IIâ€™s favourite architect. At the time it was built, the Palais de Justice was the worldâ€™s biggest building project, costing around $1 billion in todayâ€™s money.

The courthouse was built in an imposing position overlooking the Marolles, somewhat intended to intimidate the rebellious residents. A large part of the Marolles (around 3,000 houses) was demolished to make way for the building.

â€œThe architect went mad before the project could be finished, supposedly cursed by a witch from the Marolles. The term architek or schieven architek (twisted architect) became a serious term of abuse in the Marolles thereafterâ€¦â€

Just to let you know, I learned all this in the book (by AndrÃ© de Vries) I mentioned in my last post, which I would recommend to anyone who wants to know about the history of Brussels. The author also gives over a few pages to HergÃ© and Belgian comic strips/authors generally.

I would love to know enough Flemish to be able to at least try to understand the dialect. Speaking a bit of French is sadly not enough!

You don't set the bar very high when it comes to conversational gambits, do you? ;-)

Seriously, this is really interesting stuff, Why do Birds, so thank you for the info; the only bit that

I'd heard before, but had forgotten, was the architek insult. I think it was in the BD-themed pocket walking-guide which you can get at the Tourist Office and comic-shops in Brussels (and in English-language as well as French and Flemish editions!).
If you have ever walked through what is left of the Marolles (it is very picturesque, now gentrified, and there are some lovely shops and squares), you can see why: the Palais is just massive, and sitting on what amounts to a ledge looming over the houses now situated at the bottom of a masonry cliff.
To be fair, the Palais de Justice is quite a remarkable structure in its own right, even when only seen from the train as you enter the city, but more so close to. I don't have the guide to hand at the moment to furnish their names, but the building has been a great favourite with B.D. artists, and features in several albums.

But I would have been pretty annoyed with it going up if I lived below (or worse, in the bit they flattened...).

A visit to the puppet theatre is something I have always meant to do, so you have given me a reminder of that. Sadly my Dutch only runs to buying trying train tickets, food, and the odd drink when actually talking, but I can sort of follow conversations, and Flemish is about the same; still I wouldn't be up to following dialect...! Good luck if you try to learn it!

Heh heh, thanks for that! Rather similar to the English bullsher, also often used for a conceited person. Dutch is similar to English in a lot of ways. Some of the HergÃ©-isms are easily understandable, like Wadesdah (what is that) and Bab-el-ehr (babbler).

I just came across this list of insults in 'Brusseleer', which I assume is just Brussels slang. It even mentions the author is compiling a dictionary of Brussels insults. There's 'sewage emptier', 'greasy rag' and even 'house painter' (which probably has some odd story like 'architect' behind it, no doubt.) They are quite Haddock-esque, aren't they?

As many of Tin tin Fans well aware of this site .
I want to ask that is that language information complete and prepare a person to speak Syldavian?
Is there any one who speak Syldavian?
Or any fan who adds more words, more complete grammar?
Is there any linguist Tintin fan out there who wants to work on that?
Any other site , research article or thesis?
Thank you for your time ,

As you can see, your message has been moved to the thread you started before, and it would appear that the sum total of what we know about Syldavian is contained in this thread, but even more so on the Zompist web-site, which you know about already. It looks like a quite thorough summation of the situation (provided you only need to speak about, cars, goats and sceptres, that is!).

There are a lot of variants of Marollian. The main versions are:
- Brabantish with a bit more influence of French vocabulary than other Brabantish towns
- French with contamination to a varying degree by Brabantish Others include:
- some with contamination with walloon
- some with combination with Bargoens (Rottwelsch)
"Brabantish" is a Low-Franconian language, related to Dutch.
Any of the variants heard in Brussels may be called "Marollien" by some.

As to grammar, a suggestion for you to start with:
- Speak French with a Dutch syntax
- Speak Dutch with a French syntax
- Use vocabulary from one language in the other
- Try to learn Brabantish pronounciation (learn about sound shifts between Brabantish and Dutch).

The only historically real language is Brussels Brabantish. Every Brussels parish has its own variant. Other versions, especially Brussels French, are a bit artificial as far as it collects and combines errors against French spoken by thousands of people, presented in a way that one typical single person would make all these errors. Basically it is a collection of hillarious mistakes made by someone at some occasion. Some people really like it. In literary style it is often used to ridiculaze Flemish people who pompously try to make themselves important by trying to speak French with words they do not fully understand. The style was especially popular at the first part of the 20th century (with theatre pieces as "Le mariage de Mlle Beulemans", "Bossemans et Coppenolle" etc.)

There are hundreds of publications, most for amusement. I guess I have between 50 and 100 on my bookshelves.

My selection for the moment:
1 - Brabantish from Brussels
G. Mazereel, "Klank- en vormleer van het Brusselsch dialect, met zijn plaatselijke verscheidenheden", 1931, Leuven, (Sound and Morphology, in Dutch)

Sera De Vriendt, "Grammatica van het Brussels", 2003, Gent (little grammar, in Dutch)

Sara de Vriendt & Marcel de Schrijver, "Brussels Lexicon", 2009, Brussel (Brussels-Dutch and Dutch-Brussels Dictionary, no comments with the words)

Marcel de Schrijver, "of uude ni good?", Het levend Brussels dialect, Brussels, no date, (Commented Brussels-Dutch dictionary, with a selected choice of expressions)

Marcel de Schrijver, "Keskeseksa", Wa es me da na?, Le dialecte bruxellois vivant, 2007, Brussels (Commented Brussels-Dutch dictionay, a version of the previous for the French speaking public)

Remon de la Sainte-Fontaine, "Sjansonetten en poÃ«ziekes", 1977, anthology of songs and other texts in Brussels

Jef Elbers, "Eer Brussels vergaat", songs in Brussels on CD

Urbaan de Becker e.a., "Brusselse VeroÃªle", stories in Brussels, audio casette

Crejatief complot, "Brel en Brassens mÃ¨ nen Brusselsen Bril", audio casette

2 - Brussels French
LÃ©opold Courouble, "La Famille Kaekebroek", reprint 2004, Brussels (fiction)

Frantz Fonson & Fernand Wicheler, "Le Mariage de Mlle Beulemans", reprint 1991 (theatre)

RTBF, "Le Mariage de Mademoiselle Beulemans", (box with 2 DVD, performances of 1967 and 1978)

Paul Van Stalle Joris Hanswyck, "Bossemans et Coppenolle", reprint 2003 (theatre)

RTBF, "Bossemans et Coppenolle", (box with 1 DVD, performance registered in 1969)

"Le Vieux Bruxelles", box with 10 CD, most of the songs in Brussels French

3 - With walloon elements
Roger Kervyn de Marcke ten Driessche, "Les Fables de Pitje Schramouille" 1948, 7th edition

4 - Rottwelsch (Bargoens) influenced Paul Van Hauwermeiren, "Bergades, Brussels Bargoens", 2010, Brussels

I found an excellent book in English called "Grammaire Bruxelloise, Simple et... Complete" from Acamedie Brussels http://www.avhb.be/Ordering information and price are here below.

To meet the wishes of a number of French-speaking inhabitants of Brussels published by the Academy of Brussels last year, a french version of its "Brussels Lexicon". This year it was, again thanks to the support of Prime Minister Charles PiquÃ©, the turn of the grammar. This grammar written by Prof.. Sera de Vriendt exists since 2003 in a Dutch version. The growing interest in the dialect in general and the interest of a number of French-speaking Brussels for the language of their parents or grandparents was reason enough for Professor de Vriendt to this unique work in French to offer. Friday, May 11, the "Grammaire bruxelloise ... simple et complÃ¨te " festively presented in the Forum of the FNAC Brussels. Guest speaker was Mr. Christian Laporte, journalist with La Libre Belgique and ardent defender of the Brussels. Academy of Brussels has the opportunity to Mr. and Mrs. Laporte Lepoivre-Daels, alderman of the municipality of Evere, to appoint " Ierelid d'Akademee. " For a photo impression please click here . You can order by: Mark Quintelier, highway 37, 3020 Herent or email him at mquindek@skynet.be. Price: 10 euros + 2 euros shipping

This book is available in Dutch also which listed at above thread author Sera De Vriendt, "Grammatica van het Brussels", 2003, Gent.

There are also 4 books below copied and pasted from Academie Brussels.
Here is the document:

Brussels Lexicon, in French
This page has been automatically translated from French into English by a translation software. Automatic translations are not as accurate as translations made by professional human translators. Nevertheless these pages can help you understand information published by the City of Brussels.

The Academy of Brussels issued the 'Lexique bruxellois', a translating dictionary French-Brussels and Brussels-French. The Brussels Lexicon had already been released in its Dutch version (2009).

The Academy of Brussels examines and analyzes the language of Brussels. It wants to preserve and promote this dialect, which originated from Dutch.

The Lexicon is not a real dictionary or grammar, but it collects more than 6,000 words in Dutch or French and the word in the Brussels dialect (the Brusseleir), and vice versa. The spelling of the words is determined by a committee of the Academy.

Publications of the Academy
Other publications of the Academy of Brussels:

Grammatica van het Brussels, of Sera de Vriendt - (co-production of the Royal Academy of Dutch Language and Literature, Ghent - Academy of Brussels, Brussels, 2003)

Bergades Brussels Bargoens - by Paul Van Hauwermeiren (Academy of Brussels, 2010)

Haiku's in het Brussels. Haikus en Bruxellois, Marcel Bauwens (Academy of Brussels, 2010)

The Academy also publishes the Brussels dialect magazine 4 times a year.

The Lexique bruxellois costs 15 euro (+ 5 euro postage):

I am collecting as much as possible information on Marollian. My best advisor is Roger Thijs from Lowlands Languages email list.
I asked at above group for the exact rule for pronunciation of marollian words at an marollian dictionary.
Below videos are excellent. If you want to hear what would like to be the hearing a speaker of Syldavian , may be first video is close. Of course you would be needed to add Slavian Ortography, I give it to your imagination.
If you want to read Marollian text when someone is playing at a theatre standup: Follow Renaat Grassin from Belgium you tube

If you want to listen an romantic music in Marollian , follow Jef Elbers from Belgium at youtube video http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=rlTORVhaGOs

I got below e mail from Lowlanders Forum and Roger was helpful again.

Umut
Let me add some comments.
1 - We are talking about a non-standardized language: every speaker has his own version.
2 - French speakers call "French with a few jokes with Brussels words" also "Marollien". This occurs especially in some theatre pieces in French. Some people enjoy this quite a lot but it is no language. I think it is a very old literary style. I have the "Bourgois Gentilhomme" of MoliÃ¨re in mind, where the would-be gentleman tries to impress with words he does not understand.
3 - The real Brussels dialect is pure Brabantish, with a little more loans from French than the Leuven or Tienen Brabantish dialects.
Brabantish is much closer to Dutch than Flemish or Limburgish in Belgium. I don't see how to study Brabantish or Brussels Brabantish without having an high degree of proficiency in Dutch.
4 - Marollien refers to a couple of streets with formerly poor people downtown Brussels. The area is becoming trendy nowadays with a variety of small shops, many with immigrated owners. In one of the local bars a cabaret group the "Creatief Complot" was performing a couple of years ago. Although the cafÃ© was in the Marolles area, the gentlemen were from Molenbeek, a suburb of Brussels, about 2 miles West of the Marolles and they performed in the Molenbeek version of Brussels.

5 - For some really scientific books (in Dutch) about Brussels dialect: some serious studies (the best!) date from the thirties, and one needs to have some linguistic background for understanding it all.
6 - However I admire your persistency and the following links may be of some help:
The academy of the Brussels dialect:
http://www.avhb.be/http://www.avhb.be/pdf/brochurespelling.pdf
http://www.brussels.be/artdet.cfm/6900
Some of their publications may still be in stock. You better contact them directly. Since some of their publications are published only in 100 to 200 copies, with xeroxed pages glued together, I doubt you can get those on Amazon. Some others are professionaly printed and one can find a few copies from time to time in the City-2 Fnac bookshop downtown Brussels. You don't find them in other Fnac shops, and I don't think they are distributed from within France by http://www.fnac.com/ .
I see the interest for Brussels dialect is nowadays more in the Flemish municipalities in the border area around Brussels: all next performances of the Brussels Volkstheater are planned in Flemish sites at the outskirt of Brussels:
http://www.beeveetee.be/producties/%E2%80%99n-kat-es-gin-poos/
Good luck with your study, Regards,
Roger

I am interested in Syldavian and I want to ask is there any software to analysis the known dictionary from Tintin books and generate new words. I think there are many programs at web but I dont know the general situation of artificial intelligence and capable programs to do my job.

I have several times used custom Perl or Awk scripts to analyze the recurrent letter/phoneme sequences in the vocabulary of under-documented conlangs and describe their phonotactics and the frequencies of various phonemes in various positions. However, I don't know of any off-the-shelf software that will do this for any arbitrary language.

For example, below is an Awk script I used to analyze the phonotactic patterns in the lexicon of Rex May's Ceqli. If you aren't familiar with Awk, the things you need to know to re-implement a similar program for a particular conlang in another language are these:

1. the main loop in { } is applied on every line of the input file.

2. The $1 variable is the first (space-delimited) field of the current line of the input file - i.e. the first word on the line.

3. The gsub function is a global search and replace, and the two-argument ersion defaults to operating on the current input line.

4. You'll also need to change all the lines which have a specific list of letters as a regular expression character class, to match the particular language you're analyzing; digraphs will need special handling, especially if they can be ambiguous. Here I'm replacing any character of a given class with a higher-level symbol such as V for vowel, S for semivowel, F for fricative and so on. I'd then put the output through further analysis, with other scripts, to see how often each overall pattern occurred.

orig = $1;
first fix diphthongs
gsub ( /ai/, "ay" );
gsub ( /ia/, "ya" );
gsub ( /au/, "aw" );
gsub ( /ua/, "wa" );
gsub ( /ue/, "we" );

gsub ( /oi/, "oy" );
gsub ( /io/, "yo" );

gsub ( /ei/, "ey" );
gsub ( /ie/, "ye" );

gsub ( /ui/, "wi" );
gsub ( /iu/, "yu" );

now replace various letters with type-symbols

gsub( /[aeiou]/, "V" );
gsub( /[yw]/, "S" );
gsub( /[lr]/, "L" );
gsub( /[nmq]/, "N" );
gsub( /[sxhfvz]/, "F" );
gsub( /[pbtdkg]/, "P" );
gsub( /[cj]/, "A" );
print $1, "\t", orig;
print $1;

pattern=$1;
gsub ( /[PFANL]/, "C", pattern );
```

print pattern "\t" $1 "\t" orig;

Essentially, it seems to me, you want to reverse-engineer the sound and spelling changes and whatnot that are being used to convert known Germanic (and Slavic, etc.) words into Syldavian.

There might, one day, be programs which are capable of this kind of thing, but that day remains on the distant horizon. About the nearest work here I know of is <http://www.pnas.org/content/early/2013/02/05/1204678110.abstract>, which took advantage of data sets much ampler and better for the task to begin with: many more languages, many more words, and (more crucially than either of those!) the cognate sets were aligned in advance, so the program didn't have to know anything about semantics. In fact, it didn't know anything about phonology, either, and got by; a program running on the meager data set we have here probably couldn't afford this. The paper cites earlier work which tried to proceed more deterministically and small-scalewise, but these ran into troubles as well.

My advice to you would be to attack this problem by human and not by computer! Indeed, the lexicon you linked was compiled by Mark Rosenfelder, who has already tried his hand at this and made up a few Syldavian words of his own: for instance, this word _lÃ¶wn_ "love" is 100% a Rosenfelder invention, with no attestation in HergÃ©. Have you tried writing Mark and asking him, or posting on his fora <http://www.incatena.org/>? He's a good guy, I imagine he'd be glad to give you pointers

Jim Henry jimhenry1973 gmail.com via listserv.brown.edu

Jul 2 to CONLANG ,

The method I talked about would work for an a priori conlang. But it wouldn't give satisfactory results for an a posteriori conlang like Syldavian. If you still want me to, I'll try to find time to hack up a script to figure out what phoneme sequences occur and how frequent they are, but I think Alex's suggestion is more useful: to match the existing Syldavian material you'll need to borrow words from French,

German, and Slavic languages, and adapt them to the spirit of the language, not randomly generate vocabulary based merely on statistical properties of the Syldavian lexicon.

While you are obviously dedicating a great deal of effort to this task, I'm not certain I understand its purpose.

HergÃ©'s Syldavian (and indeed it would seem his other forays into creating invented "foreign languages"), was for comedic effect - he co-opted words which he thought would sound funny to his readers, making jokes that a child (or interested adult) would see if they knew bits of Brussels patois. He made no attempt to provide language which wasn't humorous.

Even if it was possible to generate a constructed language which you were to call Syldavian, it wouldn't and couldn't be HergÃ©'s language, nor could you use it as he intended - to provide the appearance of saying one thing in Syldavian, whilst actually saying something else, by means of homophones and/ or puns, in Brussels's slang.

You would have to provide a vocabulary which worked on one level only, with defined, concrete meanings, and lose the primary purpose of HergÃ©'s language, which was to be funny in a slightly oblique fashion (e.g. that the "words" would mean something else, or sound like something else, when you read them out loud).

If you do create a new language, wouldn't it be better to start afresh?

HergÃ© was brought up in a French-speaking household but in Brussels.

His made-up languages and insider jokes are often based on either Flemish (Vlaams) or the patois of Brussels, namely "Brusseleir".
Thus for example, from The Broken Ear, on page 52, frame 6:

Walker: Nokho!... Wete douvan Ã¨te?...
This last bit in Vlaams is "Weet jullie iets van" ("Do you know anything about it?").

Then, when he Chief replies, he speaks in Brussels' French:

Chief: ... KwafÃªrh?. Which is the French "Quoi faire?" ("What shall we do?")

Thank you very much indeed, its great to hear back. English translation done by DeepL, Its extremelly high quality output and book grade.

Funny , my marollien to turkish translation has been sold by some stranger.

Its time to buy grammaire bruxellloise - simple et complete.

Than I will write an english grammar on marollien here. I need least one month.

Best wishes and take care , Happy Christmas!

Good news again,

My sister bought me forgotton - lost in time, marollien grammar book in french. Scanning is over and I will OCR each page one by one and than translate in to english tomorrow 06 day/07 month/2021 night, than will upload to google drive and than link to here.

Other project is to run conlanging software on to syldavian corpus and to syldavian corpus's translation in to languages of french, german, marollien, czech, hungarian, flemish, dutch, spanish and russian.

I will try to put everything in to one file and computer and try to take out new unknown syldavian corpus.

Let me be faster this time. This will be very interesting experience for me and you.

Sera de Vriendt's french book Bruxelloise, Simple et Complete, or say in english Marollien Grammar has been translated in to English from French by DEEPL. Find french one also to compare pronuncuation lists and other needs.

This is a book , extreme hard to find and it is shared for research and advertisement purposes as same as youtube rules and was impossible to read by english readers.

Happy Learning !

Your post is excellent. Thank you.

I am understanding now , sound analyze software must know the dutch , french and marollien pronuncuation and play with them. I will ask to conlanging groups.

Hello there,

Thank you for your help,

Lets start by prononcuation

How should We pronounce the marollien words and sentences ?

Please follow the thread and write most of you can.

Please give your examples within english or better latin pronouncuations,

Good evening,

Umut

My next project is to buy above book and translate in to ENGLISH again.

I am working on this project for 14 years and 30 euros and postage are huge money.

By the way , I have uploaded all files in above posts to the archive.org , search as marollien in texts or metadata. You might find them easily.

Why not contact the author/publisher of that book, and ask about an English translation? It could be that they already have such a thing, or are working on it themselves. It certainly would seem easier than translating the entire thing yourself, plus they may be able to help you in your studies.

Update: Sadly it appears that the author passed away at the end of 2020 - but I still think getting in touch with his publisher would be a good idea...

Hello Jock123 ,

I have and will translate the documents from french or dutch to english via extremelly professional artificial intelligence on cloud called deepl. Its not possible to find these highly local texts in foreign languages , I translate them to wider public by myself.

Thanks,

I'm assuming that you are doing it with permission - it'll be covered by copyright; it's not fair just to distribute someone else's life's work otherwise take, worthy of a certain confidence: in an account of 1760, of a certain Gueus, a brewer from Brussels, who would have given his name to an special beer invented by him. "An explanation, more ingenious than was given by Joe Diericx of ten Hamme in "Memories of the Old Brussels": "This name", he wrote, "seems to have been given to it by the Frenchman, who, not suspecting the strength of this beer and seeing that afterwards having swallowed only a couple of glasses, they could no longer make use of their legs, while keeping their heads very healthy, cried out: " That beer sucker! ».

The lambic, bottled, takes the name of gueuze. It is a mixture of lambic young and old lambic.
In 1950, on the occasion of the day of Saint Arnould, patron saint of brewers, I had shed a tear over the disappearance of the old beers in Brussels.
Sayfa 47Yeni Metin Belgesi (2)
Brussels: faro, lambic, shandy.
At a meeting at the Vieux Saint-Pierre, rue d'Anderlecht, a gentleman, high of waist, full belt, took me by the lapel of my jacket:
- Sir," he said, "you deplored the absence of old Brussels beers. Would you like to come and visit me, rue des Capucins?
- To whom am I speaking, sir?
- Mr. Albert Vossen, secretary of the Beer Merchants' Union, a of the three brothers, Musketeers of the Sudden Death.
- La Mort Subite, M. Vossen, is an old and noble title from Brussels, dear to the gueuze lamps.
Some say that this name comes from the fact that the sons of coffee growers were drowned in the swimming pool of the Nieuwmolen, the others, that it is an allusion to the zanzi which, with a sharp blow, eliminates an opponent and which is played preferentially in front of a good pot. What would you like to show me, rue des Capucins?
- Barrels, test tubes, densimeters, make you taste beers.
I have not regretted my visit. Wandering in the endless rows formed by hundreds of barrels of gueuze in formation, I made a discovery: that of a seigniorial house, hidden between the Blaes streets, the street Saint-Ghislain and the rue des Capucins. O you, who, in the days of drought, go to to take to "My Aunt" - In den Berg, to speak the dialect of the place - the the most treasured of your possessions, do you know what's behind the wickets and offices? A small park, with a beautiful and noble colonnaded house, adorned with a balcony with old ironwork. I saw this dreamlike landscape when I opened a window of Mr. Vossen's beer depot. Beautiful trees grow in the deserted garden, decorated with a pond. The hotel, like one of these barracks houses that we still see in Boitsfort, is uninhabited.

Mr. Vossen hands me a drink.
- Drink this," he said. I do.
- It's lambic, I say. - Perfectly. Lambic. Then what's the point of your regrets about the disappearance of old Brussels beers? Learn that the lambic is their mother to all of them and that she still lives since there are some here. The fermentation of the lambic is very long and takes at least one year, sometimes two years. or three years before the characteristic finesse and bouquet are obtained. This long fermentation requires large and numerous premises and a barrel. great. That is why there is a that close in their own equipment and in their stores.

- That's what your hundreds of thousands of liters are busy doing here, in the freshness, darkness and an aroma that must make hearts faint of so many Brussels people?
- Here we do preparation. The art of the preparer consists in making of various brews, depending on whether he wants to sell them under the form of faro, sweet lambic, gueuze in barrels or gueuze in bottles.
-- So, faro, what is it?
- A mixture of lambic at 5.5, with mars sweetened with sugar.
The pure lambic with added sugar will be the sweet lambic. The gueuze in the barrel and bottled gueuze are dry, unsweetened lambic.
- There is no sugar in the gueuze?
- No more than in this water.
And Mr. Vossen, armed with a densimeter, demonstrates it to me, then concludes:
- Gueuze is therefore the only beer allowed to diabetics.
Sayfa 48Yeni Metin Belgesi (2)
- O, dear gueuze, so unjustly scorned by Baudelaire! If I met him, this one, at the corner of Flesh and Bread Street... Passing from one "pipe" to the other, taking samples from here and there, examining bottles of gueuze to evaluate their deposits or to observe unusual streaks, such as to sails of seaweed, Mr. Vossen gave me a whole lecture on the art of the preparation. I humbly confess that I didn't understand much of it. The art of Brussels brewer is not a science that can be learned in two hours. It is necessary to years before juggling with the "Bacillus Viscosus Bruxellensis", which makes spinning the lambic, with the excesses of the young beers that make the corks pop (more than 3 million bottles of gueuze were lost in Brussels, in 1948). In these cellars of the rue des Capucins, I was amazed by the science of a gentleman who dedicates his life to the gueuze. I am, all of me, plunged in strange reflections when a strange question comes out of it:
- Sir, says Mr Vossen, what is beer?
- Beer... uh! beer... that's what I drink when I'm thirsty, that's what I drink when I'm thirsty, that's what I drink when I'm thirsty.
that Jef Lawaait pays himself when he meets a tof-mokske.
- No, Sir! Beer is bread!
- Huh?
- During the Brussels Exhibition of 1910, two chemists proved, by analysis, that one liter of lambic is equivalent, in nutritional value, to 200 grams of bread, 180 grams of meat, 72 centiliters of milk, that is to say, in wartime, a small meal at the Gargantua. In its composition, it contains 40 p.c. of wheat and 60 p.c. of malt (germinated barley).

- And the shandy, what is it?
- A blend of sweet lambic and barrel gueuze.
- But the gueuze, then? I should have started by asking you that.
- The lambic, bottled, takes the name of gueuze. It is a mixture of young lambic and old lambic. After a summer of bottle, this beer, of a special taste, pleasant, obtains, unless accidentally, a soft, foamy, and perfect bouquet, directly assimilated by the stomach, the sugars having been 100% fermented
- And the kriek?
- The kriek is made in July by adding 60 kg of cherries of Schaerbeek flat head, per 250 liter barrel. It is bottled at the beginning of winter, after decanting. Do not forget either that the lambic forms its sparkling wine in the bottle. A deposit is created. This is the reason why the gueuze must be served with care, like the burgundy. Let's serve it with care, let us serve her religiously. She deserves that, the good old gueuze.

KAS: cash box.
Dei mei ei kas (this woman has a box): This woman is pregnant.
The Brussels equivalent of "en dat in ô kas" (literally: and this in your crate!) is: "Catch, tick!".
Its origin seems to me to be to be sought in the immemorial custom that consists in collecting in a "box" (chest, piggy bank, jackpot) of money or any other precious objects. The primary meaning of the expression would have thus - as it often happens - evolved from the real to the figurative domain. The the picturesque locutions of the species swarm in the popular language: they are give it its incomparable flavor. (Eus. Plétinckx, "Why Not?", September 1937).

In Brussels we also say "vlees dee ni kan hange" (meat that cannot be hanging).
The word "kipkap" is unknown in some remote parts of the suburbs, especially in the bottom of Uccle, where the common word in Linkebeek is "koen". ».
Schuermans : chicken hood : underneath all cut meat, like : light, liver, deer, etc.
The word "kipkap" is an onomatopoeia reminding us that the meat has been minced before being coated in its vinegar jelly. I found, in a luxurious booklet-program, an air sung by Esther Deltenre and Ambreville, to the glory of the " National Kip-Kap " :
We see people who are flat as a scholle,
Like Mr Buls or Hector Denis;
Others who are gay like... the Protocol
And constipated... like Mr Vert-de-Gris!
Others, Knights of the Witte Figure,
Like M'sieu de Smet, have the dance of Saint-Guy...
All this, gentlemen, comes from food,
And the remedy is simple... here it is:
Instead of eating American cans,
We had some spitz and chivalry,
If you want to win a big belly,
You have to eat national kip-kap
Aren't we a living advertisement?
We can prober, everything is healthy in there...
Another example: the old men of eighteen hundred and thirty Don't they seem to get younger every year?
These are rabbits that the country is proud of,
They are always up, always cheerful!
In two hundred years, they will show up again!
I take off my hat when I see those beavers!
They never eat American boxes.
They never stuffed in their belly
Let the bloempanch and the national kip-kap!"

KRAAIT (krijt) : chalk.
Mé dobbel kraait schraaive (writing with double chalk): count more expensive. Comes what the coffee shop owner at whom they were making "poof" (debt) recorded in duplicate the consumptions taken.
KRABBE: crab (see crappie), also someone who is going sideways (a cron, a crust or waterspout, ne krumme or in krumme).
KRABBER: a failure, a failure, a good-for-nothing.
I. Teirlinck says that in the slang of thieves a krabber is also a writer, (perhaps because his pen scrapes the paper, the translation of krabber in this sense would therefore literally be a pencil pusher).
C. Verhavert, in "Eleven Goedige Stede" devoted a study to the word "krabber".
"and its meanings. Miser (the one who scratches, who prowls around for money), the one that the old people of Brussels called "arpaga", the cor-ruption of Harpagon, a character

KRUM and cron (cron): curved, crooked.
Krumme: wobbly. From krumme, the cron, a nickname often used. Insults thrown to the "crons": krumhol, krumzak, krumme can, krummekut, etc.
On July 21, 1860, the day of the abolition of the grants, the crowd, demonstrating its joy in Brussels, attacked a poor wobbly man who was pursued by the zwanzeurs. of the cry repeated a thousand times: "Krumme, de rechten zijn af", which is a awful pun (Bancal, duties are removed I).
KUUL (kool): cabbage, naive.
Kuulekapper: nickname given to the Saint-Gillois. Most of the authors the nickname is linked to the profession of market gardener practiced by those who were from Op-Brussel. We do not agree with them. We read, in "De Ghedwonghe Grief", a Brussels farce written by Joan De Grieck, in the middle of the 18th century.

On the subject of this qualifier with such diverse meanings, Mr. Paul Hermant writes in "Le Folklore Brabrançon", n. 12, June 1923: "Link has meanings".
very different: in linke mokke, a woman who pleases. Ne linken teirlink: a false dice. Ne linken tap: an ugly hat (in slang). Ne linken string: a copper (watch) chain. Ne linke snutter: a weird nose. 't Is link

(this is bad). Ne linken bink means "bad".
LINKADOR: arranger, who has the art of rolling others. LOBAS : lumpy, dumb, idiot. Probably comes from the Dutch "labbes" : silly, big idiot. Often used as a name for large, non-breedy dogs with a look of lump. Some believe that "lôbas" as well as "lobbies" would come from Spanish "loba" (wolf - plural "lobas"). This could be justified in as a name for a dog, but maybe it's going far in the influence that Castilian had in the past on the regional talks of our countries.
We read in "le Marollien" by H. Vreckhom: lobas (wolves, in Spanish). Mothers threatened unwise children with wolves or of another terrible animal. Some people call their dog loubas, so did they Felix Timmermans in his novel "Pallieter" and Paul Vitzthumb, the cartoonist.
LODDER mi zaen keuting: ghost, which according to the popular tradition, appeared to lazy passers-by at night. He frightened them with the rattling of his chains. and chased them in the direction of the canal.

Loeisegang: parting in the hair (lice alley).
Waloeis: thumbtack.
Laaifloeis (for body louse) and platloeis (for dish): tic-tac-toe.
A favorite insult in Brussels is "luizendarm", which is called "loeizenderm". which literally means "lice hose". A very old lady from Brussels who has preserved the memory of curious oral traditions, has taught us this The "loeizenderm" is a duct in the neck that ends behind the ear. Here is what Mrs. D. tells me. B. (a 76 year old woman from Brussels), in 1933: "All the cadavers have lice. They must be left. They come out from behind the ear. by the " loeizenderm ". Where does this macabre belief come from? A second explanation seems plausible to us, it is that of "luizen arm", "poor to lice", i.e., "louse". Insulting someone about "loeizenderm" this would therefore be to throw the epithet of "chickenshit" at him. It should be pointed out that, according to some, the "Luizenmolen", the windmill of Anderlecht, took its name from the that one of its owners was poor like Job, "so poor as to be to have lice".
LOEISSAK: lice bag. Brussels' favorite insult. I found it again spelled "luysack" in "De Bervoete Bruers". Wat meyndy, ghy luysack".

?» (What do you figure, lice bag?) Kiliaen gives "luyszack". Henne and Wauters, in their "Histoire de Bruxel-les" put in the mouth of a discontent seeing the Capuchins passing through Brussels in a proces-sion in 1790, these words: "Men siet die lapdragers en luyssaecken aile kanten ".

more than the Old Market, as some, wrongly, imagine).
C. Verhaevert (Brusselsche Typen) writes that according to historians, the Marollian, or language of the Marollians, would date from the XIV. century when a certain many Walloon workers from the south of Brabant settled in Brussels, mainly in the Brigittines district, rue des Tanneurs, etc.
In order to make themselves understood by the population, the Walloons had to employ words of their patois that the inhabitants of Brussels adopted in exchange for Flemish words.
that the Walloons employed. The hybrid dialect thus formed became Marollian.
There are few traces of the written Marollian. Words are found in pieces of chambers of rhetoric and in the works of Coco Lulu, Pitje Laids, Lowitje Peperkoek, Neele Coppenfrons, Susse Clot'-pijp, Bazoef, C. Verhavert, George Garnish, Roger Kervijn.

Like "drève", the word "pistol" is one of those words that, abroad, immediately reveal the nationality of a traveler. In the sense of "small bread", he is quite at home.

Why, moreover, would we hesitate to use it, since it is sonorous and picturesque?
We swoon at the outdated expressions of Canadians, Swiss, even the South Africans, and we don't care about the peculiarities of our language. It is a error. The words "drève" and "pistol" are very pretty. So let's continue to employ them. Moreover, to please us, no doubt, the last edition of the big Larousse gives the word "pistol" the Belgian meaning of "small".
bread".
But where does this word come from?
Some have ventured the analogy with "pistol", a coin that, in their minds, is a
The "pistol", as they say, represented the value of a "pistol". This is ridiculous, because the pistol was worth about 10 pounds, which would be at least 40 francs of our currency .
Who would imagine giving 40 francs for a "pistol"?
In a random study of Old French from the 15th century, we leafed through " Le Catholicon de Lille", Latin-French glossary, published by Aug. Scheler, by the care of the Academy of Belgium {1885), when a curious passage fell under our eyes.
This glossary, presumably compiled by a schoolboy, gives words from Latin vulgar with their translation in French or Picard of the time. On page 21 of the "Catholicon" is the word "artocopus" which the author has rendered as "bread".
délicieulx ".
A note from Scheler says:
Artocopus means both the pastry chef and his product, "panis PISTUS IN".
OLEO "... ».
The last three words of this quotation "bread kneaded in oil" are the following have struck. Wouldn't it be "pistus in oleo" that would have given birth to " pistol"?
In her dictionary, Bescherelle specifies that in Brussels, pistols are buns with milk. Currently, most bakers make their guns with ordinary paste, but in some towns of province, the pistol is still a loaf of bread. In the past, it was always be the case, judging from the tasty scenes in the paintings of the Flemish school in which white and soft guns are used to make the make your mouth water.
In this case, the word "pistol" could come from a form equivalent to "...".

pistaulaict" coming itself from "pistus in lacte".
In any case, it seems that "pistol" (weapon) and "gun" (small bread) have nothing in common as their origin and that it is chance alone which gave them an identical physiognomy.

Ess da' ni spaait da' zoe e koppeke moo rotte (isn't it a shame that a head such must rot?) : is said, about a high fact or an action of brilliance, to someone, to flatter his intelligence.
ROTTE MAGO
As a child, I often heard, in Brussels, an insult, "Rotte Magot", at which the adjective "Rotte" (rotten) gave a particular emphasis to the energetic. Actually, both words come from "Rothomago", which was the title of a play played in the 19' century.
On the other hand, "rothomago" is a Parisian slang word used by the and designating the ludion they use to say the right one.
adventure. The show had something to strike frustrated minds. The naive saw, on a table, a jar filled with water, containing a kind of small devil and covered with a stretched skin on which the fortune teller just put down the hand. A slight pressure on the skin was enough to make go up or down the ludion. By contraction, the rothomago was also called the rothomago Thomas.
It seems that the play "Rothomago" had a great success in Brussels, because the February 26, 1902, "Le Petit Bleu" in its "Carnet de la Menagère" published an recipe :
ROTOMAGOT EGGS
Not bad at all, this way of serving eggs, found in one of the good restaurants in Brussels.
I give the proportions for two people; our housewives will be able to then double or triple these proportions, depending on the size of their household.
Sayfa 109Yeni Metin Belgesi (2)
For four eggs, you need two thin slices of ham, a small sausage with the wine, one finger long or a frankfurter sausage and two or three spoonfuls of wine of tomato puree. Take one of those little round dishes in which you make the eggs in the mirror; butter it, put the two thin slices of ham in it and On top, break the four fresh eggs, one next to the other. Sprinkle with salt - less than usual because of the ham - and pepper; pour around the eggs the tomato purée in butter for a few minutes and, between the eggs, put the small sausage sliced in half in the direction of the thickness. Add a few knobs of butter and place in the oven - on a low flame. At the end of After a few minutes, the eggs are ready, i.e. the white is set, while the yellow remains soft. Serve them immediately in the same dish where you prepared them.

SAAISKE (sijsje): tarin.
SAKKERE (to swear): to swear, to blaspheme.
SALUT EN DE KOST: this expression which must go back to the Spanish period is made up of a Spanish word and a Flemish word.
Salud comes from salud: health.
Kost is Flemish for food.
In the past, when a traveller set out on his journey, he was told "Hello in de kost! ». (We wish you health and live it!).
Nowadays, it is a cavalier way that people of the Marolle. Some people say in a more complete way: " Salut en de kost en de wind van achter ", either to wish a good trip or to make people notice mockingly that they are delighted when someone leaves.
The complement "en de wind van achter", "et le vent arrière" is definitely an old wish of good journey for those who went to sea.
SAROOP: syrup.
Sarôpekrot: poop in syrup, Hal's poop.
KNOW
It doesn't know what's inside: it can't get in, this doesn't contain that. (The Spaniards have the verb caber).
SAYET : wool woven to ravauder or to knit. Sayo and sayeto in Spanish are large, buttonless gowns, especially for children.
E plotche sayet: a ball of wool.

family, in Brussels, which did not end with a "schlachelbank", whether it was a wedding, a first communion, a birthday, a banquet of "chocheté". The
The "schlachelbank" was a checkerboard of 16 or 24 squares each containing a drawing.
The animator showed each drawing with a stick and posed to the audience questions, all of which had to end with a rhyme. Suppose the the first drawing represents a police officer, the second one a police goggle. the third breast, the fourth one a bat. The commentator asked, showing the first drawing :
- Es da ne gardevil? (Is this a city guard?)
- Ja, da' d'es ne gardevil! resumed the audience in chorus.
- En ès da en heuskesbril ? (And is this a toilet seat?)
- Ja, da d'es nen heuskesbril!
- En ès er wel eemand thoeis? (And is there anyone at home?) From world on the balcony?)
- Ja, er ès wel eemand thoeis!
- En ès dat d'en vleeremoeis ? (And is this a bat?)
- Ja, da d'es en vleeremoeis!
Then came the criticism of a character in the news, like this:
- In ès da Menhier Van Dop? (And is this Mr. Van Dop?)
- Ja da d'ès Menhier van Dop!
- In hut da ne klachkop? (And is that what we call a billiard ball?)
- Ja, dat hut ne klachkop!
The word "Schlachelbank" seems to come from the German "Schluesselbank" meaning a "locksmith's bench". The game, of Jewish origin, would have been, at the beginning, a collective reading method for Jewish children learning in chorus, the names of objects represented in lockers.
To also bring closer to the "schlachelbank" the canvases divided into rectangles and that of the bonimenteurs unfolded at the fairs to show the various episodes of a crime that they described with a cane, singing a song about it.

And in "Le Bleuet" (a newspaper in Molenbeek) of October 18, 1936 is this sentence expressing drunkenness pushed to the highest degree :

"- Finish, you stoned, do a damnation, zoe threatening, colostrum, stoem, schief, scheil, strond, krimineil, baldoeder en stoemlinks-zat, that I had to put on you bedtime. »
Zatte processie
The inhabitants of Lembecq who escort the relics of Saint Veron put on military uniforms, reminiscent of old Belgian army uniforms from before 1914 some are on foot, others on horseback, this to remind us that the
The saint was of royal descent. The procession lasts most of the day and since there are many drug dealers on the long road, our military which, at the beginning, bent the leg and bent the torso, end up being used by "having flannel legs", walk zigzagging, and the audience, mocking, does not fail to qualify the beautiful procession of "zatte processie". It is besides under this strange name that it is known in folklore.

AIIei, zievert ni! be serious!
Zieveresse is the feminine of zievereir.
Zievereir is the dialectal form of a Dutch word that is written: "zeeveraar". " (drooler) and, in the feminine: " zeeveraarster " (drooler).
He comes from zeever (slime) which has, in his family: zeeverdoek (bavette), sea feathers (baver), sea beard (baveur) and sea seed (barbotin), Callewaerts dixit.

Let us now examine, in the course of time, the meanings of "zeeveraar":
"Le Grand Dictionnaire français-flamen" by Jean Waesbergue, Amsterdam 1624: " zeeveraer": a bender. Who throws drool.

"Sailing, faint talking, chattering, what are you doing there?
zeeveraer", "zee-verpot", die flauwen klap vertelt (Flanders, Brabant, Antwerp, Kempen, Limburg).
A Belgian was once convicted for using the word "zievereir".
That was in 1906. The War Council of Brabant had to know the case of a artilleryman who had called his superior "zievereir".
The Council could not but condemn. The prestige of the superior was at stake and the entire army. If he had acquitted, all the pirogues and all the artillerymen could now have told their colonel:
"Yea, my zievereir",
"All right, my zievereir."
"At your command, my zievereir." Curtio (George Garnir), writes: "The origin of the word 'zievereir' is lost in the highest antiquity. Many good spirits, however, believe that, at present already, that "zievereir" originates from the lower part of the city: the affection that the

In Ostend, the kids say "sliepe-sliepe ! ». An Ostend resident told me that the expression could derive from "geslepen" (clever) and he adds that these are always the most cunning children who make fun of their classmates in this way.
In Limburg, we find the same gesture accompanied by interjection "â slip! ». "A slip" would be the popular form of "uwe slip" (pan tone), mocked at for kids whose torn panties let a piece of the

In den bak: at the amigo or the prison.
Bak to schnik: stunner. "Garbage bin," they say, in Brussels, instead of " garbage bin".
BAKKES : figure, gueule. Cité par Schuermans : "He has an ugly bakkes".
From "bucca" and "mouth".
In the Brussels farces of the 17th century and especially in "Den uytghetapten Koopman ofte Mis-lukten Dragonder ", by Joan De Grieck, we find " Hout strax u backhuis toe " (you're going to shut up!). Backhuis or bakkes Would they be the equivalent of "oven", the place where you bake?
't Was bakkes gekreit (it was mouthwatering): a good meal, but not enough lush.
BAL: ball, ball (dance), one franc (Figure, in this last meaning, in « The Bargoensch of Roeselare ", par H. De Seyn-Verhougstraete).
BAL OP DE BOETCHES (ball on small boats) : expression used in Brussels to say that there are disputes: "You're a ball of krauts.
The origin of this expression is rather debated, but it seems to go back to the time before the war of 1914-1918, when at the National Holidays, the people ran to the Bassin du Commerce where nautical festivities took place including the "bal op de boetches".
The "vaartkapoenen" gave their annual party, which was attended by the Brussels notabilities. In front of the tribune was a boat whose mast was tilted almost horizontally carried a small basket with balls white. The stevedores had to climb up the mast to the basket and remove the balls from it.
But more often than not, they fell into the water because of the black soap that coated them.
the mast. Is it because of the difficulties of this competition that the mast came the expression relating to disputes?
Others claim that "bal op de boetches" would come from the popular dances which took place on boats, during the National Holidays, between the Gate and the of the Shore and the Laeken Bridge. In the first meaning, "ball" is would translate as "ball" and in the second one as "bal". In his book "Van Ketjes en Kiekefretters " Cypriaan Verhavert, says that all the festivities at the canal, hanging the National Holidays was called "bal op of bootjes ".
BALLEKES: minced meatballs, beef, pork or veal. It is also known as : fricadelles.
Zen ballekes: being hungry.
Ballekesdeef: formerly, the one who pilfered in the kitchens.
BALL: this word has been used to form several variants, all of which derive from the name of Nadar, the famous aeronaut of the last century.
This is how we find "balloon-adar, balloon-nadar, ballongadaâ, etc".
In his book "Cinq Jours avec Ch. Baudelaire", Maurice Kunel told a story about a Nadar's ascent to the Botanical Garden.
This Nadar made such an impression that his name became part of the language Brussels, not only in terms of aerostation, but also in terms of clans the word "nadar barrier" or "adar barrier" refers to barriers used to channeling crowds during public celebrations or ceremonies.

BANAME : banana.
BARBE (pull it): playing hooky.

BATTER (to beat): To fight.
BAZOEF: Here is the definition given by H. Van Vreckhom (the Marollian)
"Bajouve, from basofia = meal relief, food not very tasty. The final a is replaced by e.
Basofe or bajove = bajouve. Bajouve means the reliefs of the reserved table to the poor in bourgeois houses.
Basoef, also from basofia, applies by extension to the man who drinks a lot. and eats dirty".
In Spanish: bazofia = gravel, leftovers, scraps of a meal; also: gazofia, of bazo: the spleen.
By G. Freddy (Brussels Unknown) :
"The "bedelaar" has large pockets where the "machine-gun" and a basket are piled up, a tote bag where the victuals are buried. These are consumed by the beggar himself, except for bread, which is sold to cowherds, milkmen, and the restaurant leftovers that are sold to small industrialists in the neighborhoods which make economical dishes out of them. This is what we calls in Paris a "harlequin" and that one designates in the Marolles under the name of "harlequin".

BULS ('t ès vè) : the expression "'t ès vè Buls" means "it's for nothing", it's free.
It seems that this expression comes from the fact that one day Charles Buls, the mayor of Brussels, had seen a certain number of people coming from under his windows.
its constituents who, to celebrate its merits, had resorted to a brass band. To thank them, the burgomaster, who could not accompany them to the Main Square, begged them to go there and drink a drink to his health without him, at the "Café du Sac". The group of merry demonstrators took to the streets to the sound of the bugle and drum. The procession grows larger along the way, all the more so as the rumor spread that we were going to drink on the account of the mayor. So we said to each other one to the other: " 't is voor Buls ". It is said that, on that day, the note of the first municipal magistrate at the "Café du Sac" was quite impressive (The Evening)

SPECIES: spices and in general, everything the grocery store sells. The form of this word has a relation with the word of old picard "espesserie". which can be found in Scheler's Latin-French glossary (1885)? "Espesserie "is the Picardy translation of the old Latin "apotheca".
ESTAMINET : Although it appears in Littré, this typically Belgian and Brussels word deserves a mention in this lexicon.
"One knows, says Littré, where Bescherelle took what he says, only "estaminet". comes from the Flemish "stamenay", derived from "stamm" (sic): strain, family, and that we called "stamme" of family gatherings where people drank and smoked. As for the Spanish "estamenta", assembly of states, it has nothing to do here".
"The Belgian Nation" (29-2-1940) risks another hypothesis: "The word estaminet is purely Flemish, it would come from the Spanish "esta un minuto". "Esta un minuto" would mean "stay a minute". Estaminet would be the place where we hurriedly pass by for a drink". I just think that "estaminet" is drifting away.
of "estaim" (pewter). Until the seventeenth century the word "estamoie" was used which designated a jar with a lid, with one or two handles, containing several pints, generally in pewter, but sometimes also in goldsmith's art or glass. The place where "estamoies" were used could it not be the "estaminet"? Others think that "stamenij", "stamenee" in the Ostend dialect could derive from "stam" in the sense of "family". According to the old chronicles, written "Volk en Staat" (26-8-1941), during the meetings of family, the men swallowed a considerable number of "pots", which was a displeased the wives. Husbands, stung, decided to meet where their women would not have access. The meetings continued under the name " stam" which became "staminets". Some people still derive "stamenee" from " stamelen": stuttering, temporary disability caused by drunkenness. Finally, says the aforementioned newspaper, in Flanders, of the tenants, to attract the which is not a pillar of the church.

ÈT (hart) : heart.
And (hard): hard.
Ik zal van men èt ne stien moeke (from my heart I will make a stone): I will be ruthless, or unapproachable to pity.
And are: hard-boiled eggs. In the old Brussels cafés, the Brussels clients
One hundred percent love to eat cold hard-boiled eggs drizzled with lambic.
STATE-MAJOR :
During the German occupation from 1914 to 1918, the groups of Brussels inhabitants at crossroads or public squares gathered to communicate the "Latest news of the war", most of the bullshit. "Meetings that many people in Brussels have gotten into the habit of keeping a fixed time, between safe comrades who train throughout the day on the public highway. The Brussels who goes there says to you, half-serious, half-narquois: "I am going to my staff". Former military personnel, men with vague relationships with diplomacy, even if only as friends of the concierge of a legation, are much sought-after in these meetings. "(Gille - Ooms - Delandsheere: " Fifty months of German occupation").

ETEN : peas.
Spreader (pea counter): an individual of sordid avarice, a harpagon.
ETTEFRETTER (heart-eater): misanthrope, heart-eater, character unpleasant towards himself and his entourage, teasing, pessimistic.
"len de, zaïe' ga nen ettefretter! "(Well, you are unpleasant!).

WEAK

Falling weak on: having a weakness for, being prejudiced against something that is envied.
FAIL :
We borrow from H. Van Vreckhom (the Marollian) :
"Faïlle ou folle, de l'espagnol falla: bande d'étoffe. Wool, silk or lace that women put themselves on their heads when they go to church". From engravings have popularized the Brussels fault.
"The rift was a piece of black silk that went down in a straight line from the Spanish mantilla, and that the Flemish women were able to wear with a great grace.
special... This garment still existed in the small bourgeoisie in 1845. "» (L. Hymns, "Brussels in Time Past").

However, it seems that the fault of the Brussels women is not of origin. Spanish, because Henne and Wauters (History of the city of Brussels, volume I, page 173) write: "Already at that time - XIV. century - the bourgeois women had adopted the flaw, this garment so convenient and whose use is lost more and more "(i.e. around 1845). One note quotes the Flemish words "twee falien" from a deed of donation made by Siger de Heetvelde to Jean van Heerlen, clerk secretary of the city and "unam chlamidam dictam falie" in a donation made by Miss Vander Meynaertshoven at the Sainte-Gudule factory. (Aldermen's letters of January 28, 1391 and May 14, 1399, in the Archives of Sainte-Gudule).
DONE TO DONE (t sound): as you go.
Schuermans donne "à fait" : immediately, as and when. "As soon as he arrives at his daily rental pulls them up, he drinks them fait à fait. » FAK: curious example of corruption of a French word.
In the expression "op fak stoen" (watch), fak and stoen come from faction.
FAQUIN: elegant man (by mockery).
FARCE: teasing (used as a qualifier), it is a joke.
FARO: famous Brussels beer.
"Does the name of Brussels beer come from the fact that when you drink it, you have a more lucid mind, that we see more clearly? "(H. Van Vreckhom explaining his etymology: faro from Spanish faro: lighthouse). "The name faro was given by the Spaniards to our Brussels beer, says Joe Diericx from ten Hamme, because of the the resemblance of its color with the wine of Faro, a Portuguese vineyard very estimated in Spain. »
M. A. Harou (Folklore de Godarville, 1893), thinks otherwise: "the name of the the beer so dear to the inhabitants of Brussels is derived from the Castilian word "farro": liqueur.
of barley".
According to Larousse (Great Dictionary of the 19th century) the "farro" is a soup.
Spanish that is made with oats cooked in fat or lean broth, or in almond milk.
Still according to Harou, "some authors believe that 'farau', 'faraud', old word once used to designate a man who felt his brave, could
The name of the beer was given to it: beer of the farauds, hence faro! ».
Here is what the poet Ch. Baudelaire said about faro:
I said to Mr. Hetzel: "Do you drink faro? I live a little horror on his face.
barbue " No, never! faro! I say this without gall, It's beer two times drunk". Hetzel was talking like this in a Flemish café, no doubt out of caution, enigmatically; I understood that it was a fine way to tell me: "Faro : synonymous with urine".
An expression which disappeared and which dated back to the time when horses were abundant at Brussels. When one of them was peeing and his urine foaming on the cobblestones, the ketches said: "Y makes faro! ».

Hey tappe ze faro, doe tappe ze bee (here we draw faro, there beer): se sings when he sees a cripple. (See also gueuze, kriek, lambic.)
FAROCRATE: Name given, until 1914, to the great lovers of faro.
FATTY: from the nickname of the movie actor Arbuckle who was very fat. Fat (English): grease. Fatty (full of fat): Fat man.
FERMIBON: a term used by children at play, when they wanted to play. impose a veto on an opponent's maneuver. Fermi comes from "verbieden". (defend), pronounced "verbal".
At the marbles, the ban on playing twice was called "fermidobbele".
FERSEEBEKKE: colander.
FLA (from Flemish flauw): bland, boring.
Flâ proet: idle talk, useless chatter.
Flave: A person who is uninteresting or makes a fool of himself.
FLACHE: soft, without consistency.
Van Vreckhom brings it from the Spanish "flaco": skinny, gaunt, without energy, low.
FLANELLEBIENE (flannel legs): weak legs.
FLOWER (flerecijn): rheumatism, gout.
Vleegende fleçaain: "flying drop", which is the name given to rheumatism that invade the whole body and deform the joints.
FLEDDERE: to go, in the sense of "how does it fledder? "(how is it going ?).
One answers: "ça beustel bien" (it sweeps well).
Schuermans: "Fledderen": flattering, "rubbing the sleeve".
FLESSEVRINGER (bottle twister): drinker, silkworm.
MATRAS FLOWER (mattress flower, vegetable horsehair, kelp): bad tobacco quality.
FLOWER: pleurisy.
FLEUS (fluks): sometimes.
Tot fleûs: see you soon.
FLIKKE : to arrange, make, dope a horse.
Flikker: entrechat, dance.
Flikkere: dancing.
Schuermans says: "Flikker": in, sprong (entrechat).
In a Marollian translation of the fable "The Cicada and the Ant" the ant said: "Ah! ti . ti whistled, which says el fourmi; well, you just have to make some flikkers to warm you up, since you haven't made a spourpot for the winter".

At the dance hall, if the Marollian has not found a lady to dance he button his jacket and wait. When the measure arrives, he leaves and starts with a flikker (entrechat) to all the lamps, then he dances as only he knows how.
... and it's still by a five beat flikker that he falls down. ("" L'Echo de la Presse", in an issue published between 1914-1918, in Brussels).
Flicker : dancing : " Commonly used idiotism. Doesn't belong to the bargoensch, but to the vernacular ". (J.-B. Courtmans, " Eccentric Language " te Zele).
In zaen bluûte flikker: naked.
Slecht geflikt: badly made, badly dressed, not well.

Let me explain how Turkish speakers typically pronounce Marollien due to their native language patterns:

Key Turkish Pronunciation Features when speaking Marollien:

1. W → V Conversion:

- Turkish has no 'w' sound, so speakers replace it with 'v'
- Example: "werk" becomes "verk"
- Example: "waar" becomes "var"

2. Consonant Endings:

- Turkish speakers pronounce final consonants clearly
- They often add a slight vowel after final consonants
- Example: "huis" becomes "huis-u"
- Example: "dat" becomes "dat-ı"

3. Vowel Harmony:

- Turkish speakers may apply Turkish vowel harmony rules
- They tend to match vowels within words
- Example: "gegaan" might become "gegan"
- Example: "gedaan" might become "gedan"

4.R Sound:

- Turkish 'r' is rolled/trilled
- They use this rolled 'r' in Marollien words
- Example: "straat" with rolled 'r'
- Example: "broer" with rolled 'r'

5.H Sound:

- Turkish 'h' is stronger than in Marollien
- They emphasize 'h' sounds more
- Example: "huis" with strong 'h'
- Example: "hier" with strong 'h'

6.Stress Patterns:

- Turkish usually stresses the last syllable
- This affects Marollien word stress
- Example: "TAfel" becomes "taFEL"
- Example: "KEUken" becomes "keuKEN"

7.Specific Sound Changes:

- 'sch' becomes 'sh'
- 'ui' becomes 'uy'
- 'eu' becomes 'ö'
- 'ij' becomes 'ay'

Let me give you some practical examples:

Original Marollien → Turkish Speaker Pronunciation:

1. "wat is dat?" → "vat is dat-ı"
2. "waar ga je?" → "var ga ye"
3. "kom hier" → "kom hir-i"
4. "goedemorgen" → "gudemorgen"
5. "ik weet het" → "ik vet het"
6. "werken" → "verken"
7. "waarom" → "varom"
8. "wonen" → "vonen"
9. "straat" → "stıraat" (with rolled r)
10. "school" → "skol"

Would you like me to provide more specific examples or focus on particular sound patterns?

U

explain everything

Let me explain the complete interaction between Turkish pronunciation patterns and Marollien dialect:

1. BASIC SOUND SYSTEM

Vowels - Turkish Influence:

- 'aa' in Marollien becomes 'a' (longer)
- 'oo' becomes 'o' (pure)
- 'ee' becomes 'e' (clear)
- 'ui' becomes 'uy'
- 'eu' becomes 'ö'
- 'ij/ei' becomes 'ay'

Consonants - Turkish Influence:

- 'w' always becomes 'v'
- 'h' is pronounced stronger

- 'r' is always rolled/trilled
- 'g' is harder
- Final consonants are pronounced clearly
- 'sch' becomes 'sh'

2.WORD STRUCTURE CHANGES

Beginning of Words:

- Initial 'h' is emphasized
- 'w' becomes 'v' immediately Examples:
- "waar" → "var"
- "huis" → "huys" (strong h)
- "werk" → "verk"

Middle of Words:

- Double consonants are pronounced distinctly
- Vowel combinations follow Turkish patterns Examples:
- "komen" → "komen" (clear 'k')
- "praten" → "praten" (rolled r)

End of Words:

- Final consonants get slight vowel addition
- Final -en becomes clearer Examples:
- "huis" → "huys-u"
- "komen" → "komen-i"

3.STRESS PATTERNS

Turkish Influence on Stress:

- Tends toward final syllable stress
- Changes Marollien natural rhythm Examples:
- MANneke → manNEke

- KEUken → keuKEN

4.SPECIFIC MAROLLIEN EXPRESSIONS WITH TURKISH PRONUNCIATION

Basic Phrases: Original → Turkish Pronunciation → English "wa is da?" → "va is da-a" → "what is that?" "'k zen muu" → "k zen mu-u" → "I am tired" "kom hier" → "kom hir-i" → "come here"

Daily Conversations: "goeiemorgen" → "guyemorgen" → "good morning" "tot ziens" → "tot zins-i" → "goodbye" "dank u wel" → "dank u vel-i" → "thank you"

5.GRAMMATICAL INFLUENCES

Article Pronunciation:

- "de" becomes clearer "de"
- "het" becomes "het-i" Examples:
- "de man" → "de man"
- "het huis" → "het-i huys"

Verb Changes:

- Final -en pronounced clearly
- Present tense endings emphasized Examples:
- "komen" → "komen-i"
- "gaan" → "gan"

6.COMMON PRONUNCIATION PATTERNS

Weather Expressions: Original → Turkish Pronunciation "'t is warm" → "t is varm" "het regent" → "het regent-i"

Time Expressions: "vandaag" → "vandag" "morgen" → "morgen" (rolled r)

7.SPECIFIC SOUND COMBINATIONS

Common Clusters:

- "sch" → "sh"
- "chr" → "kr"
- "str" → "str" (rolled r)

Examples: "school" → "shol" "straat" → "strat" (rolled r) "schrijven" → "shriven"

8.INTONATION PATTERNS

Question Intonation:

- Rising at end (Turkish influence)
- Clearer word endings

Statement Intonation:

- More level than Marollien
- Less variation in pitch

9.PRACTICAL EXAMPLES IN CONTEXT

Shopping: "Hoeveel kost dat?" → "Hovel kost dat-ı?" "Te duur" → "Te dur-u"

Directions: "Rechts" → "Rehts" "Links" → "Links-i" "Rechtdoor" → "Rehtdor"

Would you like me to expand on any of these aspects or provide more specific examples in certain categories?

alect Grammar and Pronunciation

U write me the grammar of prononcuation of brusseler dialect in most complex way and complete write long post

Edit I'd be happy to write about the grammar and pronunciation of the Brussels dialect in a complex and comprehensive manner. This will be a lengthy post covering various aspects. Would you like me to focus on any specific areas first, such as phonology, morphology, or syntax? Or shall I begin with a general overview and then delve into each area systematically?

Copy Retry

U begin general and delve in to each area

Edit Certainly. I'll start with a general overview and then delve into specific areas of the Brussels dialect, known locally as "Brusseleir" or "Bruxellois". This will be a comprehensive exploration of its linguistic features.

General Overview:

The Brussels dialect is a unique linguistic variety that emerged from the convergence of Dutch (specifically Brabantian) and French influences in the Belgian capital. It's characterized by its distinct phonology, lexicon, and grammatical structures that set it apart from both standard Dutch and French. The dialect has been in decline since the mid-20th century but remains an important part of Brussels' cultural heritage.

Now, let's delve into specific linguistic areas:

Phonology: a) Vowel System:

The dialect features a complex vowel system with both monophthongs and diphthongs. Notable is the presence of front rounded vowels, such as /y/ and /ø/, which are absent in many languages. The schwa /ə/ plays a significant role, often appearing in unstressed syllables. b) Consonant System:

The dialect retains the Dutch /x/ (voiceless velar fricative), but it's often realized as [ç] (voiceless palatal fricative) in certain environments. The /r/ is typically realized as a uvular trill [ ] or fricative [ ], influenced by French. Final devoicing is common, with voiced consonants becoming voiceless at the end of words. c) Prosody:

Stress patterns are generally similar to Dutch, with stress typically falling on the first syllable of native words. Intonation patterns show influence from both Dutch and French, creating a unique prosodic landscape. Morphology: a) Nominal Morphology:

Gender system: The dialect retains the Dutch three-gender system (masculine, feminine, neuter), but with some variations in assignment. Plural formation: Multiple strategies exist, including -en, -s, and umlaut plurals. Diminutives:

Formed with suffixes like -ke or -ske, often with vowel changes in the stem. b) Verbal Morphology:

Conjugation patterns show influence from both Dutch and French. Tense system: Includes present, past, future, and various perfect tenses. Mood: Indicative, subjunctive (though less used than in French), and imperative. Aspect: Progressive constructions exist, often formed with auxiliaries like "zijn aan het" + infinitive. Syntax: a) Word Order:

Basic order is typically SVO in main clauses, but SOV in subordinate clauses (as in Dutch). V2 phenomenon: The finite verb occupies the second position in main clauses. Topicalization: Elements can be fronted for emphasis. b) Negation:

Double negation is common, often using "nie" (from Dutch "niet") and "ni" (from French "ne"). c) Question Formation:

Inversion is used for yes/no questions. Wh-questions typically front the interrogative word. Lexicon: The vocabulary is a rich mixture of Dutch and French origins, with some unique local coinages. Many words show phonological adaptations, e.g., French loanwords adapted to Dutch phonology. Semantic shifts are common, with words taking on meanings distinct from their source languages. Sociolinguistic Aspects: Code-switching between the dialect, standard Dutch, and French is common among speakers. Register variation exists, with different forms used in formal vs. informal contexts. Age-graded variation is significant, with younger speakers generally using fewer dialect features. Historical Development: The dialect evolved from Medieval Dutch, specifically the Brabantian variety. French influence increased significantly from the 18th century onward. Standardization pressures from both Dutch and French have led to dialect leveling in recent decades. Orthography: No standardized orthography exists, but attempts at writing the dialect often use adaptations of Dutch spelling conventions. Some writers use French-influenced spellings to represent certain sounds. This overview provides a complex and detailed look at the grammar and pronunciation of the Brussels dialect. Each of these areas could be expanded upon significantly with more specific examples and analyses. Would you like me to elaborate on any particular aspect?

U expand each area

Edit Certainly. I'll expand on each area, providing more detailed information and examples for the Brussels dialect. This will be a comprehensive exploration, so I'll break it down into multiple parts for clarity.

Part 1: Phonology

a) Vowel System (expanded):

The Brussels dialect features a rich vowel inventory, including:

Front unrounded vowels: /i/, / /, /e/, / / Front rounded vowels: /y/, / /, /ø/, /œ/ Central vowels: /ə/, / / Back vowels: /u/, / /, /o/, / /, / /, /a/ Diphthongs include / i/, /œy/, / u/, and in some cases /iə/, /uə/.

Notable features:

The distinction between long and short vowels, e.g., /a:/ vs / / Vowel reduction in unstressed syllables, often to schwa /ə/ Vowel harmony processes, where vowels in adjacent syllables influence each other Example: The word "huis" (house) is pronounced [œys] in the dialect, compared to standard Dutch [hœys].

b) Consonant System (expanded):

The consonant inventory includes:

Plosives: /p/, /b/, /t/, /d/, /k/, /g/ Fricatives: /f/, /v/, /s/, /z/, / /, / /, /x/, / / Nasals: /m/, /n/, /ŋ/ Liquids: /l/, /r/ Approximants: /j/, /w/ Key features:

The /r/ is typically realized as a uvular trill [ ] or fricative [ ] The /g/ is often realized as a fricative [ ] rather than a plosive Final devoicing is prevalent, e.g., "hond" (dog) is pronounced [h nt] Assimilation processes are common, especially across word boundaries Example: The phrase "ik heb" (I have) might be realized as [k p] due to final devoicing and assimilation.

c) Prosody (expanded):

Stress: Primary stress typically falls on the first syllable of native words Compounds often have stress on the first element French loanwords may retain their original stress patterns Intonation: Declarative sentences generally have a falling intonation Yes/no questions often have a rising intonation Wh-questions typically have a falling intonation, but with a higher pitch on the question word Rhythm: The dialect shows a tendency towards stress-timing, like Dutch, but with some syllable-timed influences from French Example: The sentence "Wa zède gaa aan 't doen?" (What are you doing?) would have stress on "Wa" and "doen", with a slight rise in intonation on "gaa" and a fall on "doen".

Part 2: Morphology

a) Nominal Morphology (expanded):

Gender system: Three genders: masculine, feminine, and neuter Gender assignment can differ from standard Dutch, e.g., "de sok" (the sock) is feminine in the dialect but masculine in standard Dutch Plural formation: -en suffix: "boek" (book) → "boeken" -s suffix: "stoel" (chair) → "stoels" Umlaut plurals: "voet" (foot) → "veet" Irregular plurals: "kind" (child) → "kindere" Diminutives: -ke suffix: "huis" (house) → "huiske" -ske suffix: "man" (man) → "manneke" Often involve vowel changes: "boom" (tree) → "boemke" Case system: Largely lost, but remnants remain in certain fixed expressions and pronouns b) Verbal Morphology (expanded):

Conjugation patterns: Present tense: ”ik werk” (I work), ”gij werkt” (you work), ”hij werkt” (he works) Past tense: Regular verbs add -de or -te, e.g., ”werkte” (worked) Irregular verbs often follow Dutch patterns but with phonological adaptations Tense system: Present: ”Ik eet” (I eat) Simple past: ”Ik at” (I ate) Present perfect: ”Ik heb gegeten” (I have eaten) Past perfect: ”Ik had gegeten” (I had eaten) Future: ”Ik zal eten” (I will eat) or ”Ik ga eten” (I’m going to eat) Mood: Indicative: Used for factual statements Subjunctive: Rare, but used in some fixed expressions Imperative: Formed by using the stem of the verb, e.g., ”Kom hier!” (Come here!) Aspect: Progressive constructions: ”Ik ben aan ’t eten” (I am eating) Habitual aspect often expressed through adverbs: ”Ik eet altijd hier” (I always eat here) Example: The verb ”gaan” (to go) conjugated in present tense: ik ga, gij gaat, hij gaat, wij gaan, gulle gaat, zij gaan

This covers the expanded sections on Phonology and Morphology. Would you like me to continue with the remaining areas?

Copy Retry

U yes

Edit Certainly. I’ll continue with the expanded sections on Syntax, Lexicon, Sociolinguistic Aspects, Historical Development, and Orthography of the Brussels dialect.

Part 3: Syntax

a) Word Order (expanded):

Main Clauses: Basic SVO order: ”Ik eet een appel” (I eat an apple) V2 phenomenon: The finite verb occupies the second position Example: ”Gisteren at ik een appel” (Yesterday I ate an apple) Subordinate Clauses: SOV order: ”...dat ik een appel eet” (...that I an apple eat) Conjunctions that trigger SOV: ”dat” (that), ”omdat” (because), ”als” (if) Topicalization: Elements can be fronted for emphasis: ”Een appel eet ik” (An apple I eat) Verb Clusters: In subordinate clauses, multiple verbs cluster at the end Example: ”...dat ik een appel had kunnen eten” (...that I an apple had could eat) b) Negation (expanded):

Single Negation: Using ”nie” (from Dutch ”niet”): ”Ik zie hem nie” (I don’t see him) Double Negation: Common construction: ”Ik zie hem nie ni” (I don’t see him not) Can involve other negative words: ”Ik heb nooit niks gezien” (I have never nothing seen) Negative Concord: Multiple negative elements reinforce rather than cancel each other c) Question Formation (expanded):

Yes/No Questions: Inversion of subject and verb: ”Eet gij een appel?” (Are you eating an apple?) Wh-Questions: Fronting of interrogative word: ”Wat eet gij?” (What are you eating?) Common question words: ”wa” (what), ”wie” (who), ”woar” (where), ”wanneer” (when) Tag Questions: Often formed with ”eh” or ”nie woar”: ”Gij komt, eh?” (You’re coming, right?) Part 4: Lexicon

a) Etymology:

Dutch-origin words: Often show phonological changes: ”huis” → ”aas” (house) French loanwords: Adapted to Dutch phonology: ”parapluie” → ”parapluu” (umbrella) Unique local coinages: ” empje” (a typical Brussels dish) b) Semantic Shifts:

Broadening: ” ” (originally ”belly”, used to mean ”stomach” or ”appetite”) Narrowing: ” uves” (from Dutch ”stoof”, narrowed to mean specifically a coal stove) Metaphorical Extensions: ”zievere” (to drool, extended to mean ”to talk nonsense”) c) Idiomatic Expressions:

” n in ’t n” (legs in the little package, meaning ”to die”) ” n vè d’app l ” (legs before the apples, meaning ”to leave quickly”) Part 5: Sociolinguistic Aspects

a) Code-switching:

Intrasentential: Switching within a sentence: ”Ik ga naar de magasin” (I’m going to the store) Intersentential: Switching between sentences in conversation b) Register Variation:

Formal contexts: Tendency towards standard Dutch or French Informal contexts: Higher use of dialect features c) Age-graded Variation:

Older speakers: More likely to use traditional dialect forms Younger speakers: Often use a more leveled variety, influenced by standard Dutch and French Part 6: Historical Development

a) Medieval Origins: Evolved from Brabantian Dutch spoken in the region b) French Influence:

Increased from 18th century, especially after Belgian independence in 1830 c) 20th Century Decline:

Urbanization and migration led to dialect leveling Pressure from standard Dutch and French in education and media d) Revitalization Efforts:

Cultural initiatives to preserve the dialect in the late 20th and early 21st centuries Part 7: Orthography

a) Lack of Standardization:

No official spelling system exists for the dialect b) Dutch-based Spellings:

Many writers adapt Dutch orthography Example: ”Ik em honger” (I am hungry) c) French-influenced Spellings:

Some writers use French conventions for certain sounds Example: ”Ik em ongèr” d) Phonetic Spellings:

Attempts to represent pronunciation more closely Example: ”Ik em ooŋer” This expanded overview provides a comprehensive look at the various linguistic aspects of the Brussels dialect. Each area could be further elaborated with more specific examples and analyses. Would you like me to focus on any particular aspect in even greater detail?

Edit I appreciate your interest in further exploring the Brussels dialect. To provide you with the most relevant and detailed information, it would be helpful if you could specify which particular aspect or area you'd like me to expand on. For example, would you like me to delve deeper into:

A specific area of phonology (e.g., vowel system, consonant changes)? An aspect of morphology (e.g., verb conjugations, diminutive formation)? A syntactic feature (e.g., word order variations, complex sentence structures)? The lexicon (e.g., more examples of unique words or expressions)? Sociolinguistic aspects (e.g., current usage patterns, attitudes towards the dialect)? Historical development (e.g., specific changes over time)? Orthographic practices (e.g., comparing different writing systems used)? Or perhaps there's another specific element of the Brussels dialect that you're curious about? Please let me know, and I'll be happy to provide a more focused and detailed explanation on your area of interest.

U give me complete grammar for beginner and advanced , dive to each subject

Edit Certainly. I'll provide a comprehensive grammar guide for the Brussels dialect, covering both beginner and advanced levels. We'll dive into each subject, progressing from basic to more complex aspects. This will be an extensive overview, so I'll break it down into several parts for clarity.

Part 1: Beginner Level Grammar

Basic Pronunciation a) Vowels:

Short vowels: a (/ /), e (/ /), i (/ /), o (/ /), u (/ /) Long vowels: aa (/a:/), ee (/e:/), oo (/o:/), uu (/y:/) Diphthongs: ei (/ i/), ui (/œy/), ou (/ u/) b) Consonants:

Most consonants are similar to Dutch, with some exceptions: 'g' is often pronounced as / / (like French 'j') 'r' is typically uvular / / or / / Practice words:

"ket" (child) - /k t/ "zoet" (sweet) - /zut/ "huis" (house) - /œys/ Basic Sentence Structure a) Declarative sentences:

Subject + Verb + Object: "Ik eet een appel" (I eat an apple) b) Questions:

Yes/No: Verb + Subject + Object: "Eet gij een appel?" (Are you eating an apple?) Wh-questions: Question word + Verb + Subject: "Wa eet gij?" (What are you eating?) Personal Pronouns Singular:

1st person: ik (I) 2nd person: gij/ge (you, informal) 3rd person: hij (he), zij/ze (she), het ('t) (it) Plural:

1st person: wij/we (we) 2nd person: gulle/gelle (you all) 3rd person: zij/ze (they) Basic Verb Conjugation Present tense of "zijn" (to be):

ik ben (I am) gij zijt (you are) hij/zij/het is (he/she/it is) wij zijn (we are) gulle zijt (you all are) zij zijn (they are) Simple Negation Use "nie" after the verb: "Ik zie hem nie" (I don't see him) Basic Adjectives Adjectives usually come before nouns: "een groeëte hond" (a big dog) No change for gender in predicative position: "De hond is groeët" (The dog is big) Part 2: Intermediate Level Grammar

More Complex Pronunciation a) Vowel changes:

Part 4: Further Advanced Topics in Brussels Dialect

Phonological Variations and Dialectal Continuum a) Intra-city variations:

Differences between neighborhoods (e.g., Marolles vs. Molenbeek) Socioeconomic influences on pronunciation b) Rural-Urban continuum:

Influences from surrounding Brabantian dialects Gradual transitions to Flemish Brabant and Walloon Brabant varieties c) Tone and intonation patterns:

Rising intonation in yes/no questions Falling intonation in statements and wh-questions Use of stress for emphasis: "Ik wil DA nie" (I don't want THAT) Historical Linguistics and Etymology a) Germanic roots:

Retention of archaic Dutch forms: "gij" instead of "jij" for "you" Preservation of sounds lost in Standard Dutch: "sk-" cluster in some words b) French influences:

Loanwords: "camion" (truck), "frigo" (refrigerator) Calques: "ik heb warm" (literal translation of French "j'ai chaud" - I'm hot) c) Unique local developments:

Words specific to Brussels: "plattekaas" (cottage cheese), "stoemp" (mashed potatoes with vegetables) Pragmatics and Sociolinguistics a) Register variation:

Formal vs. informal speech Age-related differences in dialect use b) Gender-specific language use:

Traditional differences in male vs. female speech patterns Modern trends and changes in gendered language c) Politeness strategies:

Use of diminutives for politeness: ”een momentje” (just a moment) Indirect requests: ”Zoudt ge nie wa stiller kunne zijn?” (Couldn’t you be a bit quieter?) Advanced Syntax and Clause Structure a) Extraposition:

Moving elements to the end of the sentence for emphasis: ”Ik heb hem gezien gisteren, die vent” (I saw him yesterday, that guy) b) Topicalization:

Fronting of various elements for focus: ”Een appel, da eet ik graag” (An apple, that I like to eat) c) Multiple subordinate clauses:

Complex sentence structures with several layers of subordination: ”Ik denk da’k weet wa ge bedoelt as ge zegt da ge nie gelukkig zijt” (I think I know what you mean when you say that you’re not happy) Aspectual and Modal Nuances a) Inchoative constructions:

”staan te” + infinitive: ”Het staat te regenen” (It’s starting to rain) ”liggen te” + infinitive: ”Hij ligt te slapen” (He’s lying asleep) b) Durative aspect:

”blijven” + infinitive: ”Hij blijft maar praten” (He keeps on talking) c) Modal particles:

”toch”: ”Ge komt toch?” (You are coming, aren’t you?) ”eens”: ”Kom eens hier” (Come here a moment) ”maar”: ”Kom maar binnen” (Just come in) Lexical Semantics and Collocations a) Semantic fields specific to Brussels life:

Food terminology: ”stoemp”, ”bloempanch” (blood sausage) Urban geography: ”vijfhoek” (pentagon, referring to the city center) b) Idiomatic collocations:

”zijne commerce doen” (to do one’s business, often used euphemistically) ”zijne pré pakken” (to take one’s salary) c) Metaphorical expressions:

”met zijne kop tegen de muur lopen” (to bang one’s head against the wall, i.e., to persist in futility) ”in ’t oog van ’t schijf zitten” (to be in the eye of the target, i.e., to be in trouble) Language Contact Phenomena a) Interference from Standard Dutch and French:

Hypercorrection: overuse of Standard Dutch forms in an attempt to speak ”properly” False friends between dialect and standard languages b) Multilingual word play:

Puns and jokes that rely on knowledge of multiple languages c) Emergence of new hybrid forms:

Creation of new words or expressions that blend elements from different languages Discourse Analysis and Conversation Structure a) Turn-taking patterns:

Use of specific phrases to hold or yield the floor Interruption and overlap patterns in casual conversation b) Narrative structures:

How stories and anecdotes are typically structured in the dialect Use of reported speech and historical present in storytelling c) Repair strategies:

How misunderstandings are addressed and corrected in conversation Self-repair and other-initiated repair patterns This additional section delves even deeper into the intricacies of the Brussels dialect, exploring areas of linguistics that intersect with social, historical, and cultural aspects of language use in Brussels. The dialect is a living entity that continues to evolve, influenced by the multilingual and multicultural nature of the city. Is there any specific aspect of this expanded section you'd like me to elaborate on further?

U write each for

Edit Certainly. I'll provide a detailed explanation for each of the topics mentioned in the further advanced section. This will be an extensive exploration of each area.

Phonological Variations and Dialectal Continuum a) Intra-city variations: The Brussels dialect exhibits notable variations across different neighborhoods. For example:

Marolles: Known for its more "authentic" and archaic forms of the dialect. Example: "Ik em honger" instead of "Ik heb honger" (I'm hungry) Molenbeek: Shows more influence from recent immigrant communities, particularly Moroccan Arabic. Example: "Wesh, bro" (Hey, brother) - a greeting combining Arabic and English Socioeconomic influences are evident:

Working-class areas tend to preserve more traditional dialect features Upper-class neighborhoods show more influence from Standard Dutch and French b) Rural-Urban continuum: The dialect forms a continuum with surrounding areas:

Flemish Brabant: More Dutch influence Example: "Ge kunt" instead of Brussels "Ge keun" (You can) Walloon Brabant: More French influence Example: "Merci" is more common than "Dank u" for "Thank you" c) Tone and intonation patterns:

Rising intonation in yes/no questions: "Komde gij ook?" (Are you coming too?) Falling intonation in statements and wh-questions: "Ik ga naar huis." (I'm going home.) "Wa edde gij gedaan?" (What have you done?) Stress for emphasis: "Ik wil DA nie" (I don't want THAT) "GIJ hebt da gedaan" (YOU did that) Historical Linguistics and Etymology a) Germanic roots:

Retention of archaic Dutch forms: • "gij" instead of "jij" for "you" • "hem" as subject pronoun: "Hem komt ook" (He's coming too) Preservation of sounds: • "sk-" cluster in some words: "skoën" for "schoen" (shoe) b) French influences:

Loanwords: • "camion" (truck) from French, instead of Dutch "vrachtwagen" • "frigo" (refrigerator) from French, instead of Dutch "koelkast" Calques (literal translations): • "ik heb warm" (I'm hot) from French "j'ai chaud" • "ik zie u graag" (I love you) from French "je vous vois volontiers" c) Unique local developments:

Words specific to Brussels: • "plattekaas" (cottage cheese) - unique compound of "plat" (flat) and "kaas" (cheese) • "stoemp" (mashed potatoes with vegetables) - possibly from "stampen" (to mash) • "zinne keer" (listen) - unique expression, literally "see once" Pragmatics and Sociolinguistics a) Register variation:

Formal speech: • More influence from Standard Dutch • Less use of dialect-specific vocabulary Example: "Zou u zo vriendelijk willen zijn?" (Would you be so kind?) Informal speech: • Heavy use of dialect features • More contractions and elisions Example: "Wilde gij da efkes doen?" (Would you do that quickly?) Age-related differences: • Older speakers: More likely to use traditional dialect forms • Younger speakers: More influence from youth slang and English b) Gender-specific language use:

Traditional differences: • Men traditionally used more coarse language • Women were expected to use more "refined" forms Modern trends: • These differences are less pronounced now • Young women often adopt traditionally "male" speech patterns as a form of empowerment c) Politeness strategies:

Use of diminutives: • "een momentje" (just a moment) • "een pintje" (a small beer) Indirect requests: • "Zoudt ge nie wa stiller kunne zijn?" (Couldn't you be a bit quieter?) • "Ik vroeg mij af of ge misschien..." (I was wondering if you might...) Advanced Syntax and Clause Structure a) Extraposition: Moving elements to the end of the sentence for emphasis:

"Ik heb hem gezien gisteren, die vent" (I saw him yesterday, that guy) "Ze is schoon, die madam" (She's beautiful, that lady) b) Topicalization: Fronting of various elements for focus:

"Een appel, da eet ik graag" (An apple, that I like to eat) "In Brussel, daar leef ik al jaren" (In Brussels, there I've lived for years) c) Multiple subordinate clauses: Complex sentence structures with several layers of subordination:

"Ik denk da'k weet wa ge bedoelt as ge zegt da ge nie gelukkig zijt" (I think I know what you mean when you say that you're not happy) "Hij vertelde da hij gehoord had da ze zeiden da't ging regenen" (He told that he had heard that they said that it was going to rain) Aspectual and Modal Nuances a) Inchoative constructions:

"staan te" + infinitive: • "Het staat te regenen" (It's starting to rain) • "Zij staat te zingen" (She's starting to sing) "liggen te" + infinitive: • "Hij ligt te slapen" (He's lying asleep) • "De hond ligt te blaffen" (The dog is lying barking) b) Durative aspect:

"blijven" + infinitive: • "Hij blijft maar praten" (He keeps on talking) • "Ze blijft werken" (She continues working) c) Modal particles:

"toch": • "Ge komt toch?" (You are coming, aren't you?) • "Da's toch nie waar!" (That can't be true!) "eens": • "Kom eens hier" (Come here a moment) • "Probeer het eens" (Try it once) "maar": • "Kom maar binnen" (Just come in)

• ”Zeg het maar” (Just say it) Lexical Semantics and Collocations a) Semantic fields specific to Brussels life:

Food terminology: • ”stoemp” (mashed potatoes with vegetables) • ”bloempanch” (blood sausage) • ”pistolet” (small round bread roll) Urban geography: • ”vijfhoek” (pentagon, referring to the city center) • ”kleine ring” (small ring, the inner ring road) • ”Noordwijk” (North district) b) Idiomatic collocations:

”zijne commerce doen” (to do one’s business, often used euphemistically) ”zijne pré pakken” (to take one’s salary) ”zijne frak uitdoen” (to take off one’s coat, meaning to work hard) c) Metaphorical expressions:

”met zijne kop tegen de muur lopen” (to bang one’s head against the wall, i.e., to persist in futility) ”in ’t oog van ’t schijf zitten” (to be in the eye of the target, i.e., to be in trouble) ”op zijn tenen lopen” (to walk on one’s toes, meaning to be very careful or cautious) Language Contact Phenomena a) Interference from Standard Dutch and French:

Hypercorrection: • Overuse of ”hun” as subject pronoun (incorrect in Standard Dutch) • Pronunciation of final -en as [ən] instead of dialect [ə] False friends: • ”Bizar” in dialect means ”angry”, while in Standard Dutch it means ”strange” b) Multilingual word play:

Puns: • ”Ik zen in de Zenne gevallen” (I fell in the Zenne river) - plays on ”zijn” (to be) and ”Zenne” • ”C’est du kip-kap” (It’s confusing) - mixes French ”C’est du” with Dutch ”kip-kap” (headcheese) c) Emergence of new hybrid forms:

”Whatsappen” (to send a WhatsApp message) ”Ge zijt gedropt” (You’re dropped, meaning ”You’re fired” - mixing English and Dutch) Discourse Analysis and Conversation Structure a) Turn-taking patterns:

Holding the floor: • ”Wacht efkes” (Wait a moment) • ”Laat mij uitspreken” (Let me finish speaking) Yielding the floor: • ”Wa denkte gij?” (What do you think?) • ”Zeg gij ’t eens” (You say it) b) Narrative structures:

Typical story structure: Setting the scene: ”’t Was op nen dag...” (It was one day...) Introducing characters: ”Der was ne keer nen typ...” (There was once a guy...) Complication: ”En toen, wa denkte?” (And then, what do you think?) Resolution: ”En zo is ’t gekomen dat...” (And that’s how it happened that...) Use of historical present: • ”Ik kom binnen en wa zie’k?” (I come in and what do I see?) c) Repair strategies:

Self-repair: • ”Ik bedoel...” (I mean...) • ”Nee, ’t is te zeggen...” (No, that is to say...) Other-initiated repair: • ”Wa zegde gij?” (What are you saying?) • ”Ik versta u nie” (I don’t understand you) This comprehensive breakdown provides an in-depth look at each aspect of the advanced topics in the Brussels dialect. Each area reflects the complex linguistic landscape of Brussels, showing how history, culture, and social factors have shaped the language. Is there any specific part you’d like me to expand on further?

Edit I appreciate your enthusiasm for delving even deeper into the Brussels dialect. Indeed, there's always more to explore in the rich tapestry of a language variety. Let's examine some additional aspects and nuances that we haven't covered yet.

Prosodic Features and Suprasegmental Phonology a) Stress patterns in compound words:

Unlike Standard Dutch, some compounds in Brussels dialect may have stress on the second element: • "appelboom" (apple tree) → appel'BOOM • "straatlamp" (street light) → straat'LAMP b) Rhythm and timing:

Brussels dialect tends towards a more syllable-timed rhythm compared to the stress-timed Standard Dutch This gives the dialect a distinctive "sing-song" quality c) Vowel length as a meaningful feature:

Minimal pairs based on vowel length: • "man" (man) vs. "maan" (moon) • "vel" (skin) vs. "veel" (much) Morphophonological Processes a) Consonant gradation:

Alternation between voiced and voiceless consonants in related words: • "huis" (house) → "huizen" (houses) [s] → [z] • "weg" (road) → "wegen" (roads) [x] → [ ] b) Vowel alternation in verb conjugation:

Changes in stem vowels for strong verbs: • "geven" (to give): ik geef, gij geeft, hij geeft, wij geven • "zien" (to see): ik zie, gij ziet, hij ziet, wij zien c) Assimilation at word boundaries:

"dat kind" often pronounced as "dak kind" (that child) "op de" often becomes "obbe" (on the) Semantic Extensions and Shifts a) Metonymy in local expressions:

"den bak" (the box) used to refer to prison "den bascule" (the scale) used to refer to the police station (historically where suspects were weighed) b) Euphemisms:

"naar de bloemekes gaan" (to go to the little flowers) meaning to die "een stukske in zijne kraag hebben" (to have a piece in one's collar) meaning to be drunk c) Semantic narrowing and widening:

"kadee" (originally meaning a younger brother, now used for any young man) "madam" (originally a respectful term for a married woman, now can be used for any woman) Pragmatic Particles and Discourse Markers a) Sentence-final particles:

"zelle" or "zenne" for emphasis: "Ge moet da doen, zenne" (You must do that, you know) "eh" for seeking agreement: "Tis schoon weer, eh" (It's nice weather, isn't it) b) Filler words:

"allee" used as a discourse marker: "Allee, wat denkte gij?" (Well, what do you think?) "awel" (well) used to start sentences: "Awel, ik zal u es wa vertellen"

(Well, I'll tell you something) c) Hedging expressions:

"Ik peins" (I think) used to soften statements: "Ik peins da ge gelijk hebt" (I think you're right) "Zoveelste" (so-many-eth) used for approximation: "Tis den zoveelsten keer" (It's the umpteenth time) Syntactic Flexibility and Word Order Variations a) Scrambling in the middle field:

"Ik heb gisteren hem gezien" vs. "Ik heb hem gisteren gezien" (I saw him yesterday) b) Verb cluster ordering:

"Ik denk dat hij het zal kunnen doen" vs. "Ik denk dat hij het doen zal kunnen" (I think he will be able to do it) c) Extraposition of prepositional phrases:

"Ik heb gesproken met hem" instead of "Ik heb met hem gesproken" (I spoke with him) Linguistic Landscape and Language Policy a) Bilingual street signs:

Influence on pronunciation and usage of place names b) Language use in public institutions:

Code-switching practices in hospitals, schools, and government offices c) Language preservation efforts:

Local initiatives to teach and preserve the Brussels dialect Tension between promoting the dialect and adhering to official bilingualism (French/Dutch) Sociolinguistic Variation and Identity a) Brussels dialect as an identity marker:

Use of dialect features to signal "authentic" Brussels identity b) Generational differences:

Shift in dialect usage across different age groups Influence of social media and globalization on younger speakers c) Dialect continuum with surrounding areas:

Gradual transitions to Flemish Brabant and Walloon varieties Influence of other urban dialects (e.g., Antwerp, Ghent) on Brussels speech Cognitive Linguistics and Conceptual Metaphors a) Embodied metaphors:

"Uit zijne nek klappe" (to talk out of one's neck) meaning to talk nonsense "Op zijn tenen lopen" (to walk on one's toes) meaning to be very careful b) Cultural models reflected in language:

Concepts of time: "Ge zijt op tijd" (You're on time) vs. "Ge zijt bij tijd" (You're early) Spatial metaphors: "In den tijd" (in the time) used to mean "in the past" c) Blending and conceptual integration:

"Zijne plan trekken" (to pull one's plan) - blending concepts of planning and self-reliance This additional exploration touches on even more intricate aspects of the Brussels dialect, showcasing its complexity and the many layers of linguistic analysis that can be applied to it. The dialect continues to evolve, reflecting the dynamic nature of Brussels as a multilingual, multicultural city. Is there any specific area from this new set of topics you'd like me to elaborate on further?

Grammar Articles Definite articles: ”de” for masculine and feminine nouns. ”het” for neuter nouns. Indefinite articles: ”een” for all genders. Nouns Plural formation: Typically by adding ”-en” (e.g., ”huis” (house) becomes ”huizen”). Some nouns take ”-s” (e.g., ”auto” (car) becomes ”auto’s”). Adjectives Agreement: Adjectives agree with the gender and number of the nouns they modify. Commonly add an ”-e” in definite forms (e.g., ”een mooi huis” vs. ”het mooie huis”). Pronouns Subject pronouns: Ik (I), jij/je (you), hij (he), zij/ze (she), het (it), wij/we (we), jullie

(you all), zij/ze (they). Object pronouns: Mij/me (me), jou/je (you), hem (him), haar (her), het (it), ons (us), jullie (you all), hen (them). Verbs Present tense: Regular verbs follow a pattern (e.g., "werken" (to work): ik werk, jij werkt, hij werkt, wij werken). Past tense: Regular verbs: add "-te" or "-de" (e.g., "werken": ik werkte). Perfect tense: Use "hebben" or "zijn" + past participle (e.g., "ik heb gewerkt"). Word Order Main clauses: Subject-Verb-Object (SVO). Example: "Ik zie de man" (I see the man). Subordinate clauses: Verb at the end. Example: "Ik weet dat hij komt" (I know that he is coming). Vocabulary Borrowed terms: Many words are borrowed from French and reflect the bilingual nature of Brussels. Examples: "bureau" (desk/office), "courant" (electricity, from French "courant"). Pronunciation and Regional Variations The Brussels dialect is influenced by both Flemish Dutch and French. Pronunciation and certain grammatical rules can vary within different areas of Brussels and among speakers of different ages and backgrounds. For more nuanced understanding, interaction with native speakers or reference to comprehensive linguistic studies on the Brussels dialect would be ideal.

Une grammaire du bruxellois
Quel bruxellois?
La questionmérite d'être posée,cartouteslespersonnesqui parlent du bruxellois ne parlent pas de la même chose. Pour les uns, une phrasetelle queIl sait pas de cheminavecsonfils estdu bruxellois, pour d'autres cetteappellation concerneplutôt une phrasetelle que z 'emmene neuven ond gekocht. De toute évidence, il s'agit de deux langues différentes, si l'on veut de deux idiomes différents.
Tâchons d'y voir clair.
Comment caractérise-t-on le type de langage utilisé par les habitants de telle ou telle ville (ou village) ? Que signifient les expressions 'il parle anversois' ou 'il parle liégeois'. Elles ne peuvent être interprétées que comme 'il parle le dialecte (flamand) d'Anvers' ou 'le dialecte (wallon) de Liége'. Par contre, les expressions 'il parle avec un accent anversois' ou 'il a l'accent liégeois' ne font pas référence au dialecte local, mais bien à une manière d'utiliser la langue standard marquée par l'un ou l'autre trait révélateur de l'origine du locuteur. Bref, 'il parle avec un accent anversois', par exemple, ne peut que signifier que la personne en question parle le néerlandais, il estvrai avec des caractéristiques typiques d'un habitant ou d'une personne originaire d'Anvers.
La situation semble bien être différente en ce qui concerne Bruxelles: il y a, d'une part, le français de certains habitants de la capitale et, d'autre part, le dialecte brabançon, parent desdialectes parlés autour de Bruxelles, par exemple à Asse, dans le Pajottenland, à Vilvorde ou à Zaventem.
Le français régional de Bruxelles
Lefrançais régional deBruxelles estle titre de l'ouvrage deréférence, la thèse de doctorat de H.Baetens Beardsmore (1971). Cette expression caractérise bien l'usage de certains Bruxellois francophones ou bilingues.
En effet, il ne s'agit pas d'un dialecte, mais d'un ensemble de traits caractéristiques qui apparaissent,d'une manière très inégale et à des Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)degrés divers, dans le français tel qu'il est parlé par les habitants de la capitale.

A des degrés divers, c'est-à-dire qu'il y a des différences considérables non seulement d'un individu à l'autre, mais parfois chez une seule et même personne selon le milieu où elle se trouve et selon les relations qu'elle entretient avec sesinterlocuteurs: on sepermettra par exemple, consciemment ou non, davantage de formes régionales et une prononciation plus relâchée au café ou dans le vestiaire d'un cercle sportif que dans son milieu professionnel.
On peut considérer par conséquent qu'il y a un continuum extrêmement diversifié de formes du français bruxellois, allant d'une variante très proche du français le plus pur à des réalisations très marquées, c'est-à-dire présentant de nombreux traits typiquement bruxellois.
Le lecteur qui désire avoir un aperçu des traits caractéristiques du français bruxellois pourra consulter avec profit l'ouvrage de Baetens Beardsmore.
Voici quelques caractéristiques de ce français bruxellois:
• Prononciation: le son g de gant, guerre peut être prononcé comme dans les mots néerlandais Gent et gaan; les consonnes sont désonorisées en fin de mot: on prononce mange comme manche, lourde comme l'Ourthe, la fin dejambe comme celle de lampe, etc.
• Grammaire: Place de l'adjectif (devant le nom). ...(une propre chemise)
Place de assez (pas mûr assez)
Emploi du pronom possessif (il a mal a sg tête)
Conditionnel au lieu de l'imparfait....(si tu me l'aurais demandé)
Savoir au lieu depouvoir (je sais pas te le dire)
Emploi de particules modales (je vais une fois t'expliquer ça)

On remarqueraque la plupart de cestraits peuvent s'expliquer par l'influence du dialectebrabançonetqueleur présenceesttrès inégale selon les locuteurs et le milieu.
Il ne sera plus question de ce 'bruxellois' dans la suite du présent ouvrage.
Le bruxellois, un dialecte brabançon
Le bruxellois est un dialecte brabançon, appartenant au sous-groupe des dialectes brabançons du sud-ouest (Zuidwestbrabants).
Bruxelles et les dix-huit communes qui forment l'agglomération actuelle deBruxelles-capitale ont étélongtemps desentités distinctes, séparée s par deschampsou desterreslaisséesenfriche. Cecijustifie l'hypothèse que, comme ailleurs en Flandre, chacunede cesentités a pu avoir un dialecte propre.

Actuellement ces différences se sont estompées, sans toutefois disparaître entièrement: il y a eu, vraisemblablement à un rythme accéléré au cours des cent ou cent cinquante dernières années, un mélanged'habitants originaires desdifférentesentitésanciennesqui sesontprogressivementfonduesdansla grandeagglomérationet cela pour un ensemblede raisons:la mobilité généralementplus grande en milieu urbain qu'en milieu rural, les grands projets urbanistiques qui ont surtout ravagé les quartiers populaires du centre, l'arrivée massive d'immigrants qui se sont regroupés dans certains quartiers, provoquant ou accélérantle départde la population locale.
Il n'en subsiste pas moins des différences très nettes, des prononciations, des formes, voire des mots, typiques de certains quartiersou d'une partie de l'agglomération. Ainsi, par exemple,le son ôi de mots tels que ôis ('maison') et bôis ('tuyau') peut être prononcé plus fermé (oei) par certains Bruxellois, la forme des Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)diminutifs peut varier (on peut entendre, par exemple, 'n bekke et

'n betsje, ('un peu'), le participe passé de geive ('donner') peut être gegeive ou gegouve.
Les formes proposées dans cet ouvrage sont celles utilisées par des Bruxellois du centre de l'agglomération (dans le 'pentagone' de Bruxelles-Ville ou les quartiers proches: Molenbeek, chaussée d'Anvers, etc.)
C'est ce bruxellois-là, ce dialecte, qui est décrit dans cet ouvrage.
Une grammaire 'simple et complète'
L'expression 'simple et complète' figure entre guillemets dans le titre de cette partie de l'introduction, pour deux raisons:
• d'une part, cela nous rappelle notre adolescence, le temps où nous utilisions une 'grammaire française simple et complète', 'une grammaire latine simple et complète' et une 'grammaire grecquesimple et complète'. Évidemment,aucunede ces grammaires n'était vraiment simple (pour nous) et, puisqu'elles étaient destinées à des adolescents, elles n'étaient certainement pas complètes !
• d'autre part, comme ces grammaires scolaires, cette grammaire du bruxellois n'est ni simple, ni complète. Certains pensent qu'un dialecte est une forme simplifiée, abâtardie d'une langue standard. Il n'en est rien. C'est plutôt le contraire. Nos dialectes sont nés il y a plusieurs siècles et se sont transformés progressivement.
Cette grammaire du bruxellois n'est pas simple. Prenons un exemple: la formation des diminutifs. En bruxellois, chaque nom qui désigne un être vivant ou un objet a une forme que l'on appelle un diminutif. On indique par là que la personne, l'animal ou la chose dont on parle est de petite taille: on a donc nen ond ('un chien') et 'n ondsje ('un petit chien'), 'n toêfel ('une table') et 'n toêfelke ('une petite table'), etc. Le suffixe qui forme les diminutifs peut avoir 5 formes différentes ! Dans les exemples ci-dessus, on avait —sjeet —ke,mais il y a aussi —tsje (comme dans boentsje, 'petit haricot'), -eke (koemeke, 'petit bol') et —ske(kerkske , 'petite église'). On peut comparer ces formes aux diminutifs néerlandais: là aussi, il y a 5 formes différentes, mais aucune n'est la même qu'en bruxellois! De

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)plus, comme en néerlandais, le choix du suffixe estrégi par des règles (voir plus loin, le chapitre consacré aux formes du nom); des formes telles que *ondske ou *toêfelske par exemple sont totalement exclues.

Cette grammaire n'est pas non plus complète, il y a incontestablement des aspects de la grammaire du bruxellois qui sont traités d'une manière sommaire ou même totalement ignorés. Il y a à cela plusieurs raisons:

• ce livre n'est pas destiné à des linguistes, mais à un public de lecteurs intéressés par le bruxellois,
• certains aspects de la grammaire du bruxellois n'ont pas encore été étudiés.

Toutefois, à certains égards, cette Grammaire donne plus d'information que ce à quoi on pourrait s'attendre: le premier chapitre donne un aperçu de l'orthographe et de la phonétique du bruxellois. Il s'agit là d'une nécessité absolue:

• une grammaire ne se conçoit pas sans exemples!
• pour écrire ces exemples, il faut utiliser une orthographe; le bruxellois est, comme tous les dialectes, avant tout un idiome parlé: il convient donc de présenter un inventaire des sons du bruxellois et de voir comment ces sons sont orthographiés;
• la forme des mots bruxellois peut varier selon la position où ils se trouvent dans une phrase, selon la forme du mot précédent ou suivant; ces changements de forme peuvent être considérables; il convient donc de montrer quand et comment ils se produisent.

Quelques conventions.

Dans cet ouvrage, les exemples (mots, formes, phrases) bruxellois sont en gras: ondsje, toêfelke.

Une traduction en néerlandais, si elle s'avère utile, est imprimée en italique: hondje, tafeltje.

Une traduction en français est placée entre guillemets: 'petit chien', 'petite table'.

Là où il apparaît nécessaire d'insister sur le fait que la prononciation est remarquable, on n'a pas utilisé de caractères phonétiques, mais

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)bien l'orthographe du bruxellois; l'exemple estalorsplacéentre< >, par exemple: fritvet <fritfet >.

Remerciements

Cettegrammairedubruxellois estla traduction,revueet augmentée de la Grammatica van het Brussels publiée en 2003 par l'Academie van het Brussels et la Koninklijke Academie voor Nederlandse Taal- en Letterkunde.

Comme dans la Grammatica, la plupart des exemples ont été empruntés à des enregistrementsréalisés avec de nombreux Bruxellois. Qu'ils soientremerciésici pour leur collaboration.

Je suis particulièrementreconnaissant,d'une part à Vincent Jabé, d'autre part à Marcel De Schrijveret à mon épouseMarie-Jeanne, qui ont lu tout l'ouvrage et ont fait descommentairesextrêmement utiles.

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)CHAPITRE 1: PHONÉTIQUE ET ORTHOGRAPHE

Ce chapitre est composé de deux parties: d'abord une présentation des sons du bruxellois et de leur forme écrite (l. I ensuite une analyse de quelques règles qui changent la forme desmots (l .2.).

1.1. Les sons et l'orthographe du bruxellois

Dans cet ouvrage, l'orthographe utilisée est celle qui a été définie par une commission de l' Academie van het Brussels.

Cette commission s'est efforcée de proposer une orthographe qui permetteunelectureaiséedesphrasescitéesenexempleetqui puisse être utilisée sansdifficulté par les personnesdésireusesde produire elles-mêmes des textes en dialecte bruxellois.

A. Principes généraux
1. Les sons du bruxellois qui existent aussi en néerlandais standard sont rendus par les mêmes lettres que dans cette langue. Ainsi, par exemple, ou (comme dans oupe, nl. open, fr. 'ouvert') se lit comme dans le néerlandais oud et non comme en français cou , ch représente la consonne de acht (fr. 'huit') et non celle du français chou.
2. On applique aussi les principales règles d'orthographe du néerlandais:
• la consonne est redoublée entre une voyelle brève et une autre voyelle: rat / ratte ('rat'), em / emme ('ai / avons / ont'), kët / këtte ('court') . La consonne n'est pourtant pas redoublée après une voyelle brève écrite au moyen de deux lettres: boek / boeke ('livre / livres').
• y et Z ne s'écrivent qu'en début de syllabe: leive / leifde / geleifd ('vivre, vivait, vécu').
• on ne tient pas compte, en principe, des règles d'assimilation qui influencent la prononciation (voir 1.2.2. ci-dessous): valle , ik val (prononcé < ik fal > , 'je tombe') , fritvet (prononcé < fritfet , 'graisse à frites')
• sauf en ce qui concerne y et Z les consonnes terminales des formes brèves sont identiques à celles des formes longues: Iach comme Iache , lig comme ligge.

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Note: Le son g est rendu par è à la fin d'un mot: mè (nl. met, fr. 'avec'), vè (nl. voor, fr. 'pour'), nè (interjection). On écrit également avecaccentdèn (nl. dan, fr. 'alors') pour distinguer cemot de l'article den, ainsi que èt (nl. hart, fr. 'cœur'; nl. hard, fr. 'dur'; nl. hebt, fr. '[tu] as'; nl. eet, fr. 'mange') pour distinguer cesmots de et, article ou pronom (nl.het).
2. Les voyelles longues aa comme dans vraa (fr.
geete (fr.
ie ien (fr.
oo roope (fr.
oê oêk (fr.
eu zeuke (fr.
puut (fr.
le â de 'âge') le ée de 'jetée') le ig de 'pie') le de 'côte') le ou de 'joue') le eu de 'meute') le U de 'dure')
vêr (fr-belge le ê de 'fête') variante régionale de oê: Lôke / Loêke,
fr. 'Laeken'. (= fr. le g de 'sort').
3. Les diphtongues
ei comme dans eite (fr. le gi de 'veille') ui vuil (n'existe pas en français) ou bouve (n'existe pas en français) au saus, paus (n'existe pas en français) ooi gooi (n'existe pas en français) Avec une différence de durée:
ai comme dans paipke (fr. = +/- le ai de 'aïe') aai paaip (n'existe pas en français)

01 moind (n'existe pas en français) ôi ou oei bôîk/boeik (n'existe pas en français)
C. Quelques cas particuliers
Alors que, en principe, on ne tient pas compte des règles (phonétiques) d'assimilation dans l'écriture, des exceptions ont été prévues pour rendre la lecture à la fois plus aisée et plus proche des réalisations phonétiques dans les cas suivants:
• le g (dit "muet") de la fin de quelques mots brefs (ne comptant qu'une syllabe) s'effacedevantune voyelle. On le remplacealors par une apostrophe:

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)z'eit (nl. ze heeft, 'elle a') d'ander vraa (nl. de andere vrouw, 'l'autre femme') • Dans tous les autres cas, ce même e "muet" est suivi de n devant une autre voyelle:
neige (nl. negen, 'neuf') neigen of teen (nl. negen of tien, 'neuf ou dix') ei paaisde da... (nl. hij dacht dat 'il pensait que... ') ei paaisden uuk da... (nl. hij dacht ook dat..., 'il pensait aussi que... ')
• On n'écrit pas le des formes conjuguées qui ne se prononce pas si le mot suivant commence par une consonne:
ei komt (nl. hij komt, 'il vient') ei kom ni (nl. hij komt niet, 'il ne vient pas')
• On n'écrit pas non plus le du radical qui ne se prononce pas devant d ou t:
liere (nl. leren, 'apprendre') ei liet (nl. hij leert, 'il apprend') ei lie ni (nl. hij leert niet, 'il n'apprend pas')
• On écrit le g qui apparaît pour éviter un hiatus dans des formes contractées, verbe + et:
ei eit (nl. hij heeft, 'il a') ei eiget ni (nl. hij heeft het niet, 'il ne l'a pas')
• On écrit en un mot des groupes formés du verbe à la 2ième personne du présent et du pronom sujet:
g'èt (nl.je hebt, 'tu as') / eie (nl. hebje, 'as-tu') ge komt (nl.je komt, 'tu viens') / komde (nl. komje, 'viens-tu')
D. Les mots d'emprunt
Le bruxellois a emprunté et emprunte toujours de nombreux mots au français.
En règle générale, on a proposé d'adopter les règles de l'orthographe bruxelloise si la prononciation du mot français a été clairement adaptée au dialecte local:
plafong gidong kondensoêse
'plafond'
' guidon'
' condensation '

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Par contre, si la prononciation est restée inchangée, on conservera en principe l'orthographe originale:
robinet lion ordinateur
etc...
Ces mots sont imprimés en italique. Ainsi, on peut distinguer aisément, par exemple, fakteur (facture, le -eu- se prononce comme dans le mot français 'deux') etfacteur (facteur).

On conserve également l'orthographe originale (française) dans le radical des verbes en -er, qui deviennent en bruxellois des verbes en -eire: insisteire, bougeire, suicideire, derailleire (N.B. sansaccent), etc.

1.2. Quelques particularités phonétiques du bruxellois

1.2.1. Le raccourcissement des voyelles longues

Le Bruxellois se distingue des dialectes voisins par son système de voyelles longues et de diphtongues.
Toutefois, ces voyelles et ces diphtongues deviennent brèves si elles sont suivies d'une consonne double. Ceci peut résulter de la présence d'une terminaison ou d'un suffixe. Les cas les plus fréquents se trouvent dans la conjugaison desverbes et la formation des diminutifs.
Ainsi, du verbe speile, 'jouer', on aura les formes ik speil (voyelle longue devant une seule consonne), mais ge spelt, ei spelt, l'imparfait spelde et le participe gespeld.
Le diminutif de beik ('rivière') est bekske et celui de koêk ('joue') kokske.
Comme l'indique ce dernier exemple, la voyelle peut changer (oê est devenu o). Le système de raccourcissement est très régulier, mais assez complexe. On trouvera ci-dessous des exemples pour chaque voyelle longue et pour chaque diphtongue.
Stien 'pierre' stintsje 'petite pierre'
Ien 'un' intsje 'un'(petit!) Duus 'boîte' duske 'petite boîte'
'courir' ze 'elle court' Luupe lupt
Oêk 'petit crochet' 'crochet' okske Sloêpe 'dormir' ei slopt 'il dort'

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Geete 'verser' ei git 'il verse' Reeke 'sentir' ze rikt 'elle sent'
Zeuke ' chercher' ze zukt 'elle cherche'
Roope 'appeler' ei roept 'il appelle' Boor 'paysan' boerke 'petit paysan'
'pois' etsje 'petit pois'
ei èt Eite 'manger' 'il mange' Beik 'rivière' bekske 'ruisseau'
'cuisine' Kuike këkske 'petite cuisine'.
Kouke 'cuisiner' ze kokt 'elle cuisine'.
Krôipe
Bôik
'ramper' ze krëpt 'elle rampe'
'ventre' bëkske 'petit ventre'.
Smaaite 'jeter' smait 'jette'
Paaip 'pipe' paipke 'petite pipe'.

1.2.2. Quelques règles d'assimilation des consonnes.

En bruxellois, il arrive fréquemment que des consonnes soient prononcées d'une manière différente ou même qu'elles disparaissent entièrement. Certains de ces phénomènes, qui obéissent à des règles très précises, se présentent aussi en néerlandais. C'est le cas des premières règles ci-dessous qu'une personne qui parle le néerlandais ou un dialecte flamand applique sans même s'en rendre compte.
Les consonnes finales (devant une pause) sont toujours sourdes (sauf m, n, ng, I et r): ood, 'chapeau' et good, 'bon' se prononcent < oot > et < goot >, (ik) lig 'je suis couché' et nog 'encore', se prononcent < lich> et < noch >; les mots français asperge et concierge se prononcent < aspersj > et < konsiersj

> , etc.
v, z, g et Zj deviennent sourdes, donc respectivement f, s, ch et sj, après une autre consonne (sauf après m, n, ng, I et r), par exemple dans ik val 'je tombe', prononcé < ikfal >, opzaai, 'sur le côté', < opsaai>, ik goên, 'je vais', < ikchoên>, 't genei ma ni, 'ça ne me dérange pas', < tsjeneimani >.
On observe ce même phénomène après les mots mè (préposition, 'avec') et ni (la négation). Ces mots se comportent donc comme s'ils se terminaient par —t!: mè geld, 'cet argent' se prononce <mè Chelt >, ni valle, 'ne pas tomber' se prononce < ni falle >. La même chose se produit après da (dans ses Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)diversesfonctions) et wa: da veld, 'ce champ' seprononce<da felt > , da zaain Dosje, 'ce sont desAllemands' seprononce <da saain .. .>, wa zeit em se prononce <wa seit em >.

3. Toutes les consonnes sont ou deviennent sonores devant b et d: s devient z (z'es doê, 'elle est là', seprononce < zezdoê >, f devient v (twie of draai, 'deux ou trois', < tweeiovdraai>, k se prononcecommele g français(ik blaaif, 'je reste'< igblaaif
Toutefois, t+d devient t: 't dërp, 'le village', seprononce < tërp> . Commeci-dessus(S2) on observele mêmephènomène aprèsmè,ni, da etwa: mè dei vraa, 'aveccettefemme', se prononce<mè tei vraa> et ni drinke, 'ne pasboire' seprononce <ni trinke> . Da doot da da ni muigelaaik es, 'il en résulte (litt. ça fait) que cen'est paspossible', devient: < datootatanimuigelaaikes >.
4. n s'assimile à la consonne suivante; devient donc m devant b ou p: nen buum, 'un arbre' seprononce< nembuum> etin Brussel seprononce < im Brussel>; n devient ng devantk: 'n kooi, 'une vache', seprononce< engkooi > et greunkuule, 'des choux verts', se prononce < greungkuule >.
5. d devientj (le j néerlandais)ou tombe entredeux voyelles. Comparergood et gooie, ood, 'chapeau', et sonpluriel ooies, ruud, 'rouge', et ruue. D tombeaussientren etunevoyelle: rond ronne, ond, 'chien'/onne/.
6. r tombe devant une consonne dentale (d,t,z,s). Ce phénomène s'observe
- danslesmots (wëttel, wortel, 'carotte'; bëstel, borstel, 'balai', Vëst, Vorst, la commune de Forest, etc.),
- dans les formes, verbales ou autres (de liere, 'apprendre', on aura les formes liet, liede, gelied; à côté de veer, 'quatre', on a vieteen, 14,et fieteg, 40, etc) , y compris la conjugaisonde verbesempruntésau français: opereire, opereit, opereide, gopereid, etc.

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)CHAPITRE 2: MORPHOLOGIE
Dans ce chapitre sont décrits les changementsquepeut subir la forme de certains mots. Il s'agit principalement desnoms, des articles, des adjectifs, des pronoms et des verbes. Le chapitre se composedes parties suivantes:
2.1. Le nom (pluriel et formation du diminutif)
2.2. Les articles (défini, indéfini et négatif)
2.3. L'adjectif qualificatif (forme longue, généralementterminée par —e(n)et forme brève; degrés de comparaison)
2.4. les adjectifs et lespronoms démonstratifset possessifs
2.5. Les pronoms personnels
2.6. Les pronoms relatifs
2.7. Le verbe
2.8. Les numéraux

2.1. Le nom

La plupart desnoms ont une forme de base,celle du singulier, et des formes qui en sont dérivées pour le pluriel et le diminutif.

2.1.1. Le pluriel

D'une manière générale, on peut dire que la formation du pluriel se fait à peu près comme en néerlandais.

La règle générale est: singulier + -e.

Exemples: oêp/oêpe aap, 'singe', beik/beike beek 'rivière', oîs/oîze huis, 'maison'.

Lorsque le mot suivant commence par une voyelle, la terminaison est -en; on dit donc ne stool, draai stoole, 'une chaise, trois chaises', mais stoolen en toêfels, 'des chaises et des tables'.

Quelque cas particuliers:

Le pluriel de quelques noms a une autre voyelle que le singulier: gat/goête gat/gaten 'trou', gelas/geloêze glas/glazen 'verre', graf/groêve 'tombeau', dag/doêge 'jour', stad/steie 'ville'.

babbeleirs 'bavards', etc.
• Mots en -em: errem/erreme arm 'bras', zwollem/zwolleme

Pluriel des mots terminés par —nk
Il convient de distinguer deux types de mots:
• certains ont un pluriel (régulier) en —e:bank/banke ('banque' ou 'banc'), plank/planke ('planche'), klink/klinke ('clenche');
• d'autres ont un pluriel en —nge: eirink/eiringe ('hareng'), kuinink/kuininge ('roi'), rink/ringe ('bague');
• le pluriel de joenk 'jeune animal' (peut aussi désigner un enfant) est joengene; ne pas confondre avec joenges, le pluriel de joenge 'garçon'.
Autres mots terminés par une consonne:
• Quelques rares mots ont un pluriel en -ne: keek /keekene
'poule'et um/ummene 'chemise'.
• Quelques mots ont un pluriel en -s:
kous/kouses, 'bas' (plus rarement kouse);
Fransman/Fransmans 'français' et Ingelsman/lngelsmans
'anglais' ;
zoun/zouns 'fils' (aussi zoune) zoêk/zoêke ou zoêkes 'affaire'. On emploie zoêke dans le sens général (faire des affaires, par exemple), toujours zoêkes dans l'expression 't zaain a zoêkes ni ('cela ne te regarde pas').

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Mots terminés par une voyelle
Il convient tout d'abord de distinguer les mots terminés par un -e (dit muet, mais que l'on entend !) et les mots terminés par une autre voyelle ou une diphtongue.
l. Mots terminés par —e(muet)
On peut distinguer deux types:
De nombreux mots, tous du genre féminin (sauf rugge, qui est masculin, et bedde, qui est neutre) ont un pluriel en -ne:
bedde/beddene bed 'lit' (aussi beddes) belle/bellene bel 'sonnette' bëzze/bëzzene beurs 'bourse' brugge/bruggene (aussi brugges)....brug 'pont' kapelle/kapellene (aussi kapelle).....kape/ 'chapelle', kezze/kezzene kers 'cerise' koeme/koemene kom 'bol' (aussi koemes) krabbe/krabbene, dans les deux sens de 'crabe' et 'griffe' manne/mannene (aussi manne).......mand 'panier' mugge/muggene (aussi mugges)......mug 'moustique' noile/noilene (aussi noiles) naald 'aiguille' panne/pannene pan 'poêlon'
schil pelle/pellene 'peau' pezze/pezzene perzik 'pêche' pinne/pinnene Pin 'poinçon, pointe' rëbbe/rëbbene rib 'côte'
'dos' rugge/ruggene rug
schelle/schellene schil 'tranche' sozje/sozjene sargie 'couverture' spelle/spellene (aussi spelle) speld 'épingle' stozje/stozjene (aussi stozjes) verdieping.. ' étage ' tonne/tonnene ton 'tonneau'

vodde/voddene vod 'loque' zwozze/zwozzene zwoerd ' couenne'
On retrouve la même terminaison dans les noms de couleurs des jeux de cartes: ettene ('cœurs'), koekene ('carreaux'), schuppene ('piques'), mais kloêvere ('trèfles').
Il faut remarquer que, si le mot suivant commence par une voyelle, on ajoute un -n au pluriel selon la règle générale. On aura donc de Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)voddenen angen in de kelder de vodden hangen in de kelder' les torchons pendent dans la cave'.

Les autres mots, terminés en néerlandais par -e ou -en, ont un pluriel en -s: joenge/joenges, jongen 'garçon', kusse/kusses, kussen 'coussin', loêke/loêkes, laken 'drap', muile/muiles, molen 'moulin', ouve/ouves, oven 'four', toure/toures, toren 'tour', verke/verkes, varken 'cochon', etc. Il en va de même des diminutifs: katsjes, toêfelkes katjes, tafe/tjes 'petits chats, petites tables', ainsi que des mots terminés par le suffixe —deou —te:bridde/briddes, breedte 'largeur', groeide/ groeides ou groeite/groeites, grootte 'taille'
2. Mots terminés par une autre voyelle ou une diphtongue:
On y trouve différents types de pluriel:
Des mots qui seterminaient en -r, mais dont le -r final est tombé au singulier: bee/beere, bier 'bière', veui/veure, vuur 'feu', papee/papeere, papier 'papier'
Des mots terminés par -aa: maa/maave, mouw 'manche', schaa/schaave, schouw 'cheminée', vraa/vraave, vrouw 'femme'.
Deux mots ont un pluriel en -ene: kadei /kadeiene, 'gamin' et kooi/kooiene, koe 'vache'.
D' autres mots ont un pluriel en -s, tels que breu/breus, broer 'frère', et surtout les nombreux mots empruntés au français: cahiers, ateliers, mécaniciens (voir ci-dessous).
Certains mots n'existent qu'au pluriel: moêzele mazelen 'rougeole' et zeimele zemelen 'du son', mais aussi essene, hersens 'cerveau' et oenkoste, onkosten 'des frais'.
Le pluriel des mots d'emprunt:
Quelquesraresmots empruntés à l'anglais forment leur pluriel en—s: club/clubs, corner/corners ('coup de coin' au football), computer/computers ('ordinateur'), etc.
En ce qui concerne les mots empruntés au français, la situation est beaucoup plus compliquée:
• mots se terminant par une voyelle brève suivie d'une consonne autre que —rou —1:ces mots se terminent par un —e enfrançais: 'acrobate, boîte, agrafe, philosophe,' etc. Ce —e final ne se prononce pas en bruxellois, mais on entend la terminaison du pluriel: -e ! Pour marquer la différence dans l'orthographe, on écrit cette terminaison —en:

Il y a toutefois quelques exceptions: kadei (du français 'cadet')/ kadeie, kadeis ou kadeiene, saloê ('salade')/ saloês ou saloêie.

En dialecte, il arrive très souvent, en Flandre, qu'on emploie le diminutif des noms. Il en van de même en bruxellois: on parlera donc de e pintsje 'une (petite) pinte = un verre', e menutsje 'une (petite) minute', etc.
La formation des diminutifs obéit à des règles strictes (on peut constater quelques petites différences selon les communes de l' agglomération).
Le diminutif peut être formé au moyen de 5 suffixes différents: -ke, -eke, -ske, -tsje, -sje. Comme quatre de ces suffixes commencent par une consonne, le diminutif aura souvent, devant le -e final, un groupe de deux ou plusieurs consonnes.Il s'en suit que la voyelle du radical devient généralement brève (voir ci-dessus: 1.2.1. Le raccourcissement des voyelles longues).
Diminutifs de mots terminés par une consonne:
Règle générale: suffixe —ke
Exemples:
• après P: oêp (aap 'singe') - opke; trap - trapke (trap 'escalier'); lamp - lampke (lamp 'lampe').
• après F: Stof- stofke ('poussière'), dôif (duif'pigeon') - dëfke; graf - grafke ('tombe') ; kërf (korf'panier) - kërfke.
• après S: mes (mes 'couteau') - meske; dans (dans 'danse') — danske, duus (doos 'boîte') - duske; gelas (glas 'verre') - geloske.
• Le diminutif de ôis (huis 'maison') peut être oiske, ôiske ou ôizeke ('t ëske désigne le WC) .
• après SJ: plosj (plaats 'place') - plosjke; drasj ('averse') - drasjke.
• après R: boor (boer 'paysan') - boerke; dochter ('fille')- dochterke.
Mais:
• après M le suffixe est -eke: buum (boom 'arbre') - bummeke; bloem ('fleur') - bloemeke.
• après une consonne vélaire (-g, -k ou —ng)le suffixe est -ske:
• après K: oêk (haak 'crochet') - okske; boek (boek 'livre') - boekske; kerk (kerk 'église') - kerkske.
• aprèsG: weeg (wieg 'berceau') - weegske; dag (dag 'jour') - dagske; berg (berg 'montagne') - bergske.

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)• après NG: toeng (tong 'langue') - toengske; frang ('franc') - frangske.
• après D, T et N, le suffixe est -sje: ood (hoed 'chapeau') - oedsje; pjêd (paard 'cheval') - pjêdsje ou pjedsje; and (hand 'main') - andsje; buut (boot 'bateau') - boetsje; kat (kat 'chat') - katsje; mais nest - nesteke (nest 'nid').
• après voyelle longue +L ou N, le suffixe est -tsje: stool (stoel 'chaise') - stoeltsje, ajôin (ajuin 'oignon') - ajointsje; bien (been 'jambe, os') - bintsje.
• après voyelle brève +L: bal (bal 'balle') - balleke; bril (bril 'lunettes') —brilleke.
• après e 'muet'+L: toêfel (tafel 'table') - toêfelke.
Diminutifs de mots terminés par une voyelle ou une diphtongue: Règle générale: suffixe -ke Exemples:
vraa (vrouw 'femme') - vraake; schaa (schouw 'cheminée') - schaake; bee (bij 'abeille') -beeke.
Après un e 'muet' (sjwa): vodde (vod 'loque') - voddeke; bëzze (beurs 'bourse') - bëzzeke, bedde (bed 'lit') - beddeke.
Mais, si le e 'muet' est précédé d'une consonne vélaire, le —efinal tombe et le suffixe est-ske: brugge (brug 'pont') - brugske; mokke (terme plutôt vulgaire pour désigner une femme) mokske ('copine, petite amie'); kuike (keuken 'cuisine') - këkske.
Le diminutif des mots d'emprunt:
Les mots empruntés au français (surtout) et à l'anglais peuvent former des diminutifs.
On semble éviter les diminutifs des mots terminés par —sk(casque, masque, disque, kiosque).
La formation des diminutifs suit généralement les règles mentionnées ci-dessus pour les mots d'origine brabançonne:
• Mots terminés en —b:club /clubke, teub/teubke ('tube')
• Mots terminés en —m: crême/crêmeke
• Mots terminés en —t:meneut/menutsje,frite/fritsje (mais gazette/ gazetsje et gazetke et gosette/ gosetsje et gosetke)
• Mots terminés en —z:fraise/fraiske
• Mots terminés en —n:forteun/fortuntsje (mais aussi fortunneke; toujours sardine/sardineke etjerry-can/jerry-caneke; banane/banantje, bananeke, bananke)
GRAMMAIRE BRUXELLOISE / 26 Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Mots terminés en 1: hotel/hotelleke
Mots terminés en k: bufsteik/bufsteikske et bufstekske ('beefsteak')
Mots terminés en ng: kalsong/kalsongske ('caleçon')
Mots terminés en —r:vwateur/vwaturke ('voiture')
Mots terminés par une voyelle longue ou une diphongue: pistolei/pistoleike, boezjee/boezjeeke ('bougie')
Mots terminés par un —edit 'muet' : arlozje/arlozjeke ('horloge'), stoêse/stoêseke ('gare')
Mots terminés par une voyelle brève ou nasale: vélo/véloske, carnet /carnetske, parfum/parfumske.
On peut aussiremarquerque les mots d'emprunt suivent la règle généralede raccourcissementdesvoyellesdevantdeux ouplusieurs consonnes.La voyelle brève qui s'ensuit est alors la même qu'en français:vwateur/vwaturke, forteun/fortuntsje, meneut/menutsje.
Les mots bonjour et abat-jour seprononcent avecun 'ou' long dans la deuxième syllabe, qui devient bref dan la forme diminutive: bonjourke, abat-jourke.
2.2. Les articles
2.2.1 L'article défini et indéfini

Le bruxellois a trois genres,le masculin, le féminin et le neutre. Au singulier, les articles ont souventune forme différente selonle genre du nom qu'ils accompagnent.
Au pluriel, il n'y a qu'une seuleforme pour lestrois genres.C'est la même que celle du féminin singulier.

N.B.: au féminin singulier et au neutre singulier, la forme en peut, selonle contexte,êtreprononcéesansqu'on distingue la voyelle. On peut alors aussi écrire 'n.
La règle de b,d,t,V:
Selon une règle assezcurieuse, mais très importante du fait de ses nombreusesapplications, le -n final ne seprononce, au masculin et voyelle ou une diphtongue. Comme il sera encore question de cette règleplus loin, nousl'appellerons la règle de b,d,t,V. CeV majuscule doit être interprété comme: voyelle ou diphtongue.

Quelques exemples:
Masculin singulier: den boor/ nen boor ('le/un paysan'), den deuvel/nen deuvel ('le/un diable'), den toure/ nen toure ('la/une tour'), mais (sans n) de kuinink/ ne kuinink ('le/un roi'), de paus/ne paus ('le/un pape') C'est bien le débutdu mot suivant qui détermine s'il y a un—nou pas (règle de b,d,t, V), comme le montrent les exemples suivants:
de nuis/ ne nuis ('le/un nez'), mais: nen dikke nuis ('un gros nez'), den oêp/ nen oêp ('le/un singe'), mais ne gruuten oêp ('un grand singe').
Féminin singulier: de kuike/en kuike ('la/une cuisine'), de dui/en dui ('la/une porte'), de keek/en keek ('la/une poule'), d'esp/ en esp ('le/un jambon'), d'aa vraa ('la vieille femme').
On peut remarquer que de devient d' devant une voyelle.
Neutre singulier: 't boekske/ en boekske ('le/un petit livre'), 't bedde/en bedde ('le/un lit'), 't spel/ e spel ('le/un jeu'), 't mes/ e mes ('le/un couteau').
La règle de b,d,t,V s'applique donc ici aussi (différence entre en et Pluriel des trois genres: de boore/ boore ('les/des paysans'), de kuininge/kuininge ('les/des rois'), d'aavers/aavers ('les/des parents'). Ici aussi, comme au féminin singulier, le —efinal de de tombe devant une voyelle.
On remarqueque,commeennéerlandais,l'article indéfini aaupluriel la forme 'zéro': boore ('des paysans'), kuininge (des rois'), aavers (des parents')
2.2.2
On peut considérer gin (ou gien) comme un article négatif, correspondantgénéralement au français 'ne ... pas de' . Il peut se prononcer avec un i bref ou long.

2.3. L'adjectif qualificatif
2.3.1 Forme brève et forme longue
L 'adjectif attribut:
Comme en néerlandais, l'adjectif attribut a toujours la forme brève, c'est-à-dire sans terminaison. On dit donc ei es gruut ('il est grand', masculin), dei vraa es gruut ('cette femme est grande', féminin), 't es gruut ('c'est grand', neutre), dei ôize zaain gruut ('ces maisons sont grandes', pluriel).
C'est cette forme brève que mentionnent les dictionnaires: en néerlandais groot, klein, rijk, dik, etc., en bruxellois gruut, klaain, raaik, dik, etc.
L 'adjectif épithète:
L'adjectif épithète peut avoir trois formes différentes. Comme pour les articles (voir ci-dessus), il y a une forme pour le masculin singulier, une pour le féminin singulier et le pluriel, une pour le neutre singulier.
Masculin singulier
L'adjectif prend la terminaison -en si le mot suivant commence par b, d, t, une voyelle ou une diphtongue. Dans tous les autres cas, le -n tombe (la fameuse règle de b,d,t,V).

2.3.3 Les adjectifs employés comme noms
Dans l'ensemble les formes sont les mêmes que celles décrites ci-dessus. On observe cependant quelques différences, qui concernent, d'une part, le masculin singulier et, d'autre part, le féminin singulier et le pluriel des trois genres.

Masculin singulier:
La terminaison est —e:ne zwette, 'un noir', ne flaave, 'un pâle type', nen duuve, 'un sourd', ne gooie, 'un bon (joueur, par exemple)' de klaaine, 'le petit'.
La règle b,d,t,V ne s'applique pas: on dit de zwette da ge doê zeet, 'le noir que tu vois là' (et non de zwetten da) Par contre, on ajoute un —nsi le mot suivant commence par une voyelle: daan zwetten ei gruut anne, 'ce noir a de grandesmains, onze klaainen ei basket gespeld, 'notre petit (= notre fils) ajoué au basket'.
Féminin singulier et pluriel des trois genres:
La terminaison normale est —e:'n zwette, 'une (femme) noire', 'n blinje, 'une aveugle'
Les autres formes décrites ci-dessus se retrouvent ici. On a donc, par exemple, 'n gooi 'une bonne (femme, blague, etc.)' , d'ander, 'l'autre, les autres' (l'autre homme den andere), d'Ingelse, 'les Anglais'.
De klaain peut signifier: la fillette, la fille, notre fille. On peut donc dire, par exemple, ons klaain esd'ieste van ui klas, 'notre fille est la première de sa classe'.
2.3.4 Les adjectifs empruntés au français
Ces adjectifs se comportent comme les adjectifs d'origine brabançonne, dont il a été question dans les parties précédentes de ce chapitre (2.3.1 et 2.3.2).
On a donc, par exemple, les formes suivantesde l'adjectif simpateek:
Masculin singulier:

GRAMMAIRE BRUXELLOISE / 44 Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)2.5. Les pronoms personnels
Les pronoms personnels sont des mots très fréquents et donc très utiles. En bruxellois, ils ont un assez grand nombre de formes différentes:
- selon la personne (première, deuxième, troisième),
- selon le nombre (singulier, pluriel),
- selon le genre (masculin, féminin, neutre),
- selon leur fonction dans la phrase (sujet, complément),
- selon la place qu'ils occupent dans la phrase,
- selon qu'on les prononce faiblement ou d'une manière plus accentuée, etc.

Prenons l'exemple de la le personne du singulier. Si le pronom est le sujet de la phrase, la forme normale est ik, mais dans la conversation courante, on entendra aussi souvent 'k (ex. 1ci-dessous). Si le pronom ne se trouve pas dans une phrase complète, sa forme estikke (ex.2). S'il suit le verbe, on aura'k ou ek (ex.3). Si le pronom estcomplément, saforme estgénéralementmai ou ma (ex.4), mais s'il estaccentué,par exemple derrière une préposition, on aura maai (ex.5). Enfin, dans certains cas,le pronom peut être répété (ex.6).
Exemples:
1 Ik doon da ni, ou 'k doon da ni, ikdoe dat niet, 'je ne fais pas cela'.
2 wee eit da gezeid? Ikke. Ikke ni. Wie heeft dat gezegd?lk. Ik niet. 'Qui a dit cela? Moi. Pas moi'.
3 Deizen oêved zaain'k ni tôis ou ben ek ni tôis. Deze avond ben ik niet thuis. 'Ce soir, je ne suis pas chez moi'.
4 Z'ei ma(i) ni gezeen , ze heeft me niet gezien, 'elle ne m'a pas vu'.
5 Ze was do vui maai, ze was daar vôôr mij, 'elle était là avant moi'.
6 'k Em ek ik da ni gedoên! Ik heb dat niet gedaan! 'Ce n'est pas moi qui ai fait ça!'

Une grammaire du bruxellois
Quel bruxellois?
La questionmérite d'être posée,cartouteslespersonnesqui parlent du bruxellois ne parlent pas de la même chose. Pour les uns, une phrasetelle queIl sait pas de cheminavecsonfils estdu bruxellois, pour d'autres cetteappellation concerneplutôt une phrasetelle que z 'emmene neuven ond gekocht. De toute évidence, il s'agit de deux langues différentes, si l'on veut de deux idiomes différents.
Tâchons d'y voir clair.
Comment caractérise-t-on le type de langage utilisé par les habitants de telle ou telle ville (ou village) ? Que signifient les expressions 'il parle anversois' ou 'il parle liégeois'. Elles ne peuvent être interprétées que comme 'il parle le dialecte (flamand) d'Anvers' ou 'le dialecte (wallon) de Liége'. Par contre, les expressions 'il parle avec un accent anversois' ou 'il a l'accent liégeois' ne font pas référence au dialecte local, mais bien à une manière d'utiliser la langue standard marquée par l'un ou l'autre trait révélateur de l'origine du locuteur. Bref, 'il parle avec un accent anversois', par exemple, ne peut que signifier que la personne en question parle le néerlandais, il estvrai avec des caractéristiques typiques d'un habitant ou d'une personne originaire d'Anvers.

La situation semble bien être différente en ce qui concerne Bruxelles: il y a, d'une part, le français de certains habitants de la capitale et, d'autre part, le dialecte brabançon, parent desdialectes parlés autour de Bruxelles, par exemple à Asse, dans le Pajottenland, à Vilvorde ou à Zaventem.
Le français régional de Bruxelles
Lefrançais régional deBruxelles estle titre de l'ouvrage deréférence, la thèse de doctorat de H.Baetens Beardsmore (1971). Cette expression caractérise bien l'usage de certains Bruxellois francophones ou bilingues.
En effet, il ne s'agit pas d'un dialecte, mais d'un ensemble de traits caractéristiques qui apparaissent,d'une manière très inégale et à des

La forme normale est we ou me (le —efinal tombe devant une voyelle):
We/Me ginken mè de keigele speile, 'nous allions jouer aux quilles'
W 'emme/M'emme ne kaave winter gad, 'nous avons eu un hiver froid'
La forme accentuée est waaile:
WAAILE goên ni mei, 'NOUS n'accompagnons pas'
La forme enclitique (suivant le verbe ou une conjonction) est me:
Doemei muige me de gielen dag ruste, 'de ce fait nous pouvons nous reposer toute la journée'
In de dôine zoêge me goête, 'dans les dunes, nous voyions des trous '
Ik paais da me goên tôis blaaive, 'je pense que nous allons rester à la maison'
Après un comparatif + as: WAAILE
Ze zaain ni zu lank gebleiven as waaile, 'ils ne sont pas restés aussi longtemps que nous'
Remarques:
1. Alors que le —efinal du pronom sujet tombe devant un mot commençant par une voyelle lorsque le pronom se trouve devant le verbe, ce n'est pas le cas quand le pronom me est enclitique. Là, on ajoute un —npour éviter l'hiatus:
Wannier goên men eite ? 'Quand allons-nous manger ?'
Ik paais da men em doê gezeen emme, 'je pense que nous l'y avons vu'
2. La séquence emme me ('nous avons' en forme inversée) est souvent réduite à emme:
Oevuil emme doevui moote betoêle ? 'combien avons-nous dû payer pour cela?'
Dèn emme ni kenne speile, 'alors nous n'avons pas pu jouer'
Gisteren emmen em ni gezeen, 'hier nous ne l'avons pas vu' (= il n'est pas venu)
GRAMMAIRE BRUXELLOISE / 54 Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Le pronom peut être répété (une forme avant et une après le erbe):
We zaain waaile deizen oêved ni tôis, 'nous ne serons pas à la maison ce soir' W'emme WAAILE da ni gedoên, 'ce n'est pas NOUS qui avons fait cela'.
4. Combiné avec la conjonction as, le pronom peut soit être conservé (as me), soit être réduit (amme):
Amme da geweiten aaie ! , 'si nous avions su cela ! '
Ammen em moeste loête doon 'si nous le laissions faire ...
Le pronom est complément
Une seule forme: ons
Ei goêt ons ni willen ëlpe, 'il ne voudra pas nous aider'
Ze zaain mè ons meigeweist, 'ils nous ont accompagnés'
2.5.7. Deuxième personne pluriel

Le pronom est sujet:
Les formes les plus fréquentes sont les mêmes qu'au singulier: ge, ainsi que les formes enclitiques qui perdent le g- initial:
G'èt niks loête weite, 'vous n'avez rien fait savoir'
La forme pleine est différente: gaaile
C'est cette forme pleine qu'on retrouve en cas de répétition du pronom et après un comparatif:
G'èt gaaile niks loête weite, 'vous n'avez rien fait savoir'
Ge moet GAAILEN em da ne ki zegge, 'c'est VOUS qui devez le lui dire'
Me speile beiter as gaaile, 'nous jouons mieux que vous'
Le pronom est complément
Une seule forme: aaile
W 'emmen aaile doê ni gezeen, 'nous ne vous y avons pas vus'
We zon no 't sinema Wille goên mè aaile, 'nous voudrions aller au ciné avec vous'
2.5.8. Troisième personne du pluriel
Le pronom est sujet
La forme normale est ze:
GRAMMAIRE BRUXELLOISE / 55 Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Ze zaain ni kontent, 'ils ne sont pas contents'
Ze ligge doê, 'ils se trouvent là' (ou: elles se trouvent là; il n'y a aucune différence entre les trois genres)
Z'emmen ons ni ginviteid, 'ils (ou elles) ne nous ont pas invités'
La forme accentuée est zuile:
ZUILE komme bè ons mè neuvejoêr, 'EUX viennent chez nous à la nouvelle année'
La forme enclitique est ze:
Wat emme ze gezeid ? 'qu'est-ce qu'ils ont dit ?'
Après un comparatif: zuile
Il luup rapper as zuile, 'je cours plus vite qu'eux (ou qu'elles)'
Remarques:
1. La répétition du pronom est possible (un pronom devant le verbe, un après):
Ze muige zuile da ni doon, 'ils ne peuvent pas faire cela'
Ze muige ZUILE da ni doon, 'EUX ne peuvent pas faire cela'
2. La forme zuile ne peut être utilisée que pour désigner des personnes; pour désigner des objets, on emploie le pronom démonstratif dei:
Dei ligge doê, 'ils ou elles se trouvent là' (il s'agit de balles, de chemises ou de documents)
Le pronom est complément
S'il s'agit de personnes, le complément direct est ze, la forme du complément indirect et après une preposition est uile:
'k Em ze doê ni gezeen, 'je ne les y ai pas vus'
Geift er uile tweei of draai, 'donne-leur en deux ou trois'
Me goên bè uilen op vezeet, 'nous allons leur rendre visite'
S'il s'agit d'objets, le complément direct est ze:
Loit ze doê mo ligge, 'laisse-les là'
2.5.9. Les formes triples ou doubles
Comme on a pu le voir dans les pages précédentes, les pronoms personnels peuvent être répétés et même, à la première personne du singulier, répétés deux fois.
Le nombre de formes varie selon la personne, le nombre et la place du pronom par rapport au verbe.

Les avatars du -t.
La terminaison-t de la 2e et de la 3e personneet de l'impératif est très sensibleàsonenvironnement.Elle subitdiversestransformations:

4.
-t se prononce <d> devant un voyelle si le radical se termine par une autre consonne ou une voyelle (la règle de 't kofschip !): Ainsi, on a du verbe komme (radical kom-) komt ons oêle, 'viens nous chercher' <komdons>; du verbe leize (radical leiz-) leist iest, 'lis d'abord ' <leizdiest>; du verbe volge (radical volg-) volgt ons, 'suivez-nous' <volgdons>; du verbe stoên (radical stoê-) 't stoêt ee, 'ça se trouve ici' <stoêdee>.
De même, à la deuxième personne avec inversion: komde fluis?

'tu viens tout à l'heure ?' iest leisde den titel, 'd'abord tu lis le titre'; dèn volgde den tram, 'ensuite, tu suis le tram'
Remarque:
Cette règle ne s'applique évidemment que s'il n'y apas de pause entre la forme verbale et le mot suivant, par exemple dans la phrase suivante: As g'em soêves telefoneit es em nuut ni tôis, (< telefoneid es .. .>), 'si on lui téléphone le soir, il n'est jamais à la maison'. Si, dans la même phrase, il y a une pause après telefoneit, cette forme est prononcée <telefoneit> .
-t tombe (disparaît!) si le mot suivant commence par une consonne:
ei kom ni, 'il ne vient pas';
ze spel ni mei, 'elle nejoue pas avec (nous)';
kup ne neuven Otto, 'achète une nouvelle voiture';
mok mai da, 'fabrique-moi cela'.
Comme on l'a décrit ci-dessus (chapitre l), on n'écrit pas le t des formes conjuguées qui ne se prononce pas si le mot suivant commence par une consonne.
Remarques:
Cette règle ne s'applique pas si le verbe est suivi d'une pause (comme en 3. ci-dessus), mais elle ne s'applique pas non plus si le mot suivant est le premier d'une autre proposition:
As ge ni telefoneit paaist em da ge zeek zaait (<telefoneit >), 'si tu ne téléphones pas, il pensera que tu es malade'.
• Le -t final des verbes dont le radical se termine par —el,-em, -en, -er (où le -e- est 'muet') ne tombe pas devant une consonne:

Ze beidelt mè ui kind, 'elle mendie avec son enfant'

Ge zegt ui wa da ge paaist, 'tu lui dis ce que tu (en) penses'
Wa zegde ?, 'que dis-tu ?'
Wa zeit em? 'que dit-il?'
ZELLE, ZULLE•.
Ik zal em intsje kuupe, 'je vais lui en acheter un(e)'
Ge zel et zeen, 'tu verras'
Ei zal ons wel betoêle, 'sois tranquille,il nous paiera'.
Remarque: zelle est l'auxiliaire du futur, mais est relativement peu employé. Pour exprimer qu'une action va se produire, on emploie plus souvent le présent (teis joêr blaaive men ee 'cette année nous resterons ici') ou l'auxiliaire goên (ze goên et ni geluuve, 'ils ne le croiront pas').
2.7.2. L'imparfait et le participe passé
Comme en néerlandais, il y a, en bruxellois, desverbes dont les temps du passéseforment d'une manière simple en ajoutant une terminaison -de/te (imparfait) et -d/t (participe passé) au radical du verbe. Ces verbes sont dits réguliers. Les autres, parmi lesquels on trouve les verbes les plus courants, ont des formes plus ou moins irrégulières, qui sont reprises ci-dessous dans un tableau.
Verbes réguliers
Ceux-ci ont, à l'imparfait, une forme terminée par -de ou -te. C'est encore une fois la règle de 't kofschip qui détermine le choix de la terminaison. On a donc -te lorsque le radical setermine par p,t,k,f,s,sj ou ch et -de dans tous les autres cas. Au participe passé, le choix entre -d et -t s'explique par la même règle. On a donc:
Kappe, kapte, gekapt, 'hacher'
Pikke, pikte, gepikt, 'voler'
Kosje, kosjte, gekosjt, 'nettoyer'
Kuche, kuchte, gekucht, 'toussoter'

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Wedde, wedde, gewed, 'parier' Leive, leifde, geleifd, 'vivre'
Kamme, kamde, gekamd, 'peigner'
Schildere, schilderde, geschilderd, 'peindre'.
La différence entre les formes avec -d et celles avec -t s'entend à l'imparfait, mais aussi au participe quand le mot suivant commence par une voyelle: as ze gekosjt eit, 'quand elle a nettoyé', as ze geschilderd eit, 'quand elle a peint'.
L'imparfait n'a qu'une seule forme pour toutes les personnes (donc, par exemple, ik kamde, ge kamde, ei kamde, we kamde, ze kamde), mais on y ajoute un -n si le mot suivant commence par une voyelle: ei kamden em ('il se peignait'), au pluriel ze kamden uile ('ils se peignaient').
Du fait de la terminaison, la voyelle du radical peut se trouver devant deux consonnes et donc devenir brève, comme au présent. De speile, 'jouer', on a donc non seulement spelt, mais aussi spelde et gespeld.
Autres exemples:
Lienen, linde, gelind, 'prêter et emprunter'
Druume, drumde, gedrumd, 'rêver'
Smoêke, smokte, gesmokt, 'goûter'
Verdeene, verdinde, verdind, 'mériter'
Kouke, kokte, gekokt, 'cuisiner'
A l'imparfait, on entend parfois des formes terminées par -ge speldege, paktege, etc.

GRAMMAIRE BRUXELLOISE/ 74 Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Les verbes d'emprunt
Le bruxellois emprunte beaucoup de verbes au français.
En pratique,touslesverbesen—erpeuventêtreempruntés,à l'exception desverbesles plus courants.Comme •aller' sedit goên, 'sauter' springe, 'chanter' Zinge et 'jeter' smaaite, le bruxellois n'a pasbesoin des verbes français.
Par contre, on emploiera derailleire, fouilleire, avantageires fabriqueire, etc.
L'emprunt de verbesfrançais appartenantà d'autres classes(Verbes dont l' infinitif se termine par —ir ou —re)est beaucoup plus rare. Le bruxellois emprunte alors le radical de l'imparfait !
On a donc traduiseire ('traduisait'), pretandeire ('prétendais'), amortisseire ('amortissais'), definisseire ('définissais').

partir du radical derailleir, rouilleir, traduiseir, pretandeir, amortisseir, etc. , les diverses formes se construisent selon les règles généralesformulées plus haut:
On a donc au présent.'
Ik trompei(r) ma nuut ni, 'je ne me trompejamais'

3.1.3. ER et DOÊ

Le mot néerlandaiser a quatrefonctions différentesdansla phrase; en bruxellois, son emploi est tantôt le même, tantôt différent.

l. Er présentatif (correspondantà 'il'français dans 'il y a En néerlandais, ce er peut se trouver en tête de phrase ou après le verbe (en position enclitique); en bruxellois, er ne peut qu'être enclitique; il ne peut donc passetrouver immédiatementdevantle verbe, où l'on emploie doe (une forme affaiblie de l'adverbe doê

Doe zaain gien buumen in zaainen of, •il n'y a pas d'arbres dans sonjardin'

Doe was neemand ni, 'il n'y avait personne'

Mais:

In zaainen ofzaain er gien buume, 'danssonjardin, il n'y a pas d' arbres'

Ik paaisde dat er neemand ni vas, 'je pensais qu'il n'y avait personne'

2. Er adverbe de lieu (français 'y

Le bruxellois connaît cet emploi, mais y préfère doe OLIdOê:

In Sponje ? We zaain doê nuut ni geweist, ' En Espagne ? Nous n'y avons jamais été' ,

3. Er./àisant partie d'un adverbepronominal (diversesformes possiblesenfrançais, voir lesexemplesci-dessous)

En bruxellois, comme en néerlandais, un pronom ne désignant pas unepersonnene peut pasêtre employéaprèsunepréposition, Mè ern. par exemple, peut signifier 'avec lui' (une personne), mais non 'avec cela' (un bâton par exemple). Dans ce cas on emploie er mei ou doe mei.

lei encore,en têtede phrase,le bruxellois emploie toujours la forme doe- et donc er ne peut être qu'enclitique:

Doemei kunde ni schraaive, 'avec cela on ne peut pas écrire'

Doe-in ligge gien balle, 'dans cela, là-dedans, il n'y a pas de balles'

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Doe-op muigde ni zitte, 'on ne peutpass'asseoirdessus'

Mais

Ik paaisdag'er (ouda gedoc)Ali muigt opzitte, ' je croisqu'on ne peut pas s'asseoir dessus'.

4. Er avec une indication de quantité (français 'en

Er + une indication dequantité (l, 2, 'beaucoup', 'des tas', etc.) signifie la quantitéexpriméede ccspersonnesou de ceschoses dont on est en train de parler. Voir les exemples ci-dessous:

Ik paaisde da z' er draai aa, 'je pensaisqu'elle en avaittrois' (des frères, des sœurs. ete)

Ik em er tweei geleize, 'j'en ai lu deux' (de ces romans, par exemple)

Temmen er gistere draai binnegekreige, 'ils en ont encaissé trois hier' (des buts)

Z'eit er e giel pak tôis, 'elle ena destasà la maison' (desrobes, des chapeaux, des châles, etc.).

Lorsque le numéral estien(e), er estgénéralementomis:

'k Em gistere nog iene gezeen,'j'en ai encorevu un hier' (un Japonais, un teckel, un moineau, etc.)

'k Wil nog ien kuupe vè main vraa, 'je veux encoreen acheter une pour ma femme' (une rose, une robe, etc.)

Remarque:
comme l'indiquent les exemples,er esttoujours enclitique en bruxellois: ce mot ne peutjamais setrouver en têtede phrase.
3.1.4 Wei et weial

A grammar of Brussels
Which Brussels grammar?
The question deserves to be asked, because not everyone who speaks of Brussels are not talking about the same thing. For some, a phrase like
For some people, a sentence like "He doesn't know his way around" is "Brussels",
For others, it is a phrase such as z 'emmene neuven ond gekocht. Obviously, we are talking about two different languages, if you like, two different idioms.
Let's try to make sense of it.
How do you characterize the type of language used by the inhabitants of a
of this or that town (or village)? What do the expressions 'he speaks Antwerp' or 'he speaks Liège'? They can only be interpreted as 'he speaks the (Flemish) dialect of Antwerp' or the (Walloon) dialect of Liege'. On the other hand, the expressions 'he speaks with an Antwerp accent' or 'he has a Liège accent' do not refer to local dialect, but to a way of using the standard language marked by standard language marked by one or the other revealing trait of the the origin of the speaker. In short, 'he speaks with an Antwerp accent', for example, can for example, can only mean that the person in question speaks Dutch, that is, with characteristics typical of an inhabitant or a person or a person from Antwerp.
The situation seems to be quite different with regard to Brussels:
on the one hand there is the French of some inhabitants of the capital and, on the other hand, the Brabant dialect, related to the dialects spoken around of Brussels, for example in Asse, in the Pajottenland, in Vilvoorde or in Zaventem.

Regional French in Brussels
Regional French of Brussels is the title of the reference work, the doctoral thesis of H. Baetens Beardsmore (1971). This expression characterizes well the use of certain Brussels
French-speaking or bilingual inhabitants of Brussels.
Indeed, it is not a dialect, but a set of characteristics which appear, in a way, to be
The term is not a dialect, but a set of characteristics that appear, in a very unequal way and at different times, in the same language.

capital.
In various degrees, that is to say that there are considerable differences not only from one individual to another, but sometimes in one and the same person same person according to the environment where he is and according to the relations that he maintains with his interlocutors: one will allow oneself for example, for example, whether consciously or not, more regional forms and a looser for example, more regional forms and a more relaxed pronunciation in a café or in the locker room of a sports club the locker room of a sports club than in the workplace.
We can therefore consider that there is a continuum of continuum of forms of Brussels French, ranging from a variant very close to variant very close to the purest French to very marked realizations, i.e. presenting marked, i.e. presenting many typically Brussels features.
Brussels features.
The reader who wishes to have an overview of the characteristic features of of Brussels French will be able to consult with profit the work of Baetens Beardsmore.
Here are some characteristics of Brussels French:
- Pronunciation: the g sound of gant, guerre can be pronounced as in the Dutch words Gent and gaan; the consonants are de-sonorized at the end of the word: mange is pronounced as sleeve, heavy like the Ourthe, the end ofjambe like that of lamp, etc.
- Grammar:
Place of adjective (before the noun). ...(a clean shirt)
Place of enough (not mature enough)
Use of possessive pronoun (he has a headache)
Conditional instead of imperfect (if you had asked me) ....
Knowing instead of being able (I can't tell you) Use of modal particles (I'm going to explain to you once that) Confusion you/you (as with the police officer who recently told me recently: 'it's simple, sir, you turn left and you're there!
and you're there!');
Placement of a complement: Cg I don't remember; you eat a piece and the
and the rest you leave; three hours we had to wait;

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Order of complements: My sister bought a new coat with my mother.
I had put some paper in front of my window.
- Vocabulary: words, such as brol, crolle, snotnuis, ket, smokkeleir, froucheler/froucheleir, etc.

Also idiomatic expressions: il tire sonplan (he's getting his father than his mother (he looks more like his father than his father than his mother), he knows no way with

It should be noted that most of these stories can be explained by the Bruxellois, a Brabant dialect Bruxellois is a Brabant dialect, belonging to the subgroup subgroup of the southwest Brabant dialects (Zuidwestbrabants).

Brussels and the eighteen municipalities that form the current Brussels and the eighteen municipalities that make up the present-day Brussels-Capital agglomeration were for a long time separate entities, separated by fields or wastelands. This justifies the hypothesis that, as elsewhere in Flanders, each of these entities may have had its own dialect.
Nowadays these differences have become blurred, without however disappearing entirely.
disappear entirely: there has been, probably at an accelerated rate the last one hundred or one hundred and fifty years, there has been an accelerated the last one hundred or one hundred and fifty years, a mixture of inhabitants from the different ancient entities that which have especially devastated the working-class neighbourhoods in the center, the massive arrival of

The massive arrival of immigrants who have gathered in certain neighborhoods, causing or accelerating the departure of the local population.
Nevertheless, there are still very clear differences, pronunciations pronunciations, forms, even words, typical of certain neighborhoods In addition, there are some very clear differences in pronunciation, forms and even words that are typical of certain neighborhoods or of part of the city's population. Thus, for example, the sound ôi of words such as ôis ('house') and bôis ('pipe') can be pronounced more closed (oei) by some Brussels inhabitants, the form of the Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)diminutives can vary (one can hear, for example, 'n bekke and n betsje, ('a little'), the past participle of geive ('to give') can be gegeive or gegouve.

The forms proposed in this book are those used by the center of the agglomeration (in the 'pentagon' of Brussels-City or of Brussels-City or the nearby districts: Molenbeek, Chaussée d'Anvers, etc.)
It is this Brussels dialect that is described in this book.
A 'simple and complete' grammar
The expression 'simple and complete' appears in quotation marks in the title of this part of the introduction, for two reasons:

- first, it reminds us of our teenage years, the time when we used a 'simple and complete French grammar', a 'simple and complete Latin grammar' and a 'simple and complete and a 'simple and complete Greek grammar'. Of course, none of these grammars were really simple (for us) and, since they were were intended for teenagers, they were certainly not not complete!
- on the other hand, like these school grammars, this grammar of Brussels is neither simple nor complete. Some people think that a dialect is a simplified, bastardized form of a standard language. It is not so. It is rather the opposite. Our dialects were born several centuries ago and have been transformed gradually.
This grammar of Brussels is not simple. Let's take an example:
the formation of diminutives. In Brussels, each noun that designates a living being or an a living being or an object has a form that is called a diminutive.
This indicates that the person, the animal or the thing we are talking about is small: so we have nen ond ('a dog') and 'n ondsje ('a small dog') small dog'), 'n toêfel ('a table') and 'n toêfelke ('a small table'), etc. The suffix that forms the diminutives can have 5 different forms different forms! In the examples above, we had -sjeand -ke, but there are also -tsje (as in boentsje, 'small bean'), -eke (koemeke, 'little bowl') and -ske(kerkske , 'little church'). We can compare compare these forms to the Dutch diminutives: there too, there are 5 different different forms, but none of them is the same as in Brussels! From

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)plus, as in Dutch, the choice of suffix is governed by rules (see below, the chapter on noun forms); forms such as *ondske or *to such as *ondske or *toêfelske for example are completely excluded.
This grammar is not complete either, there are undoubtedly aspects of the grammar of Brussels which are treated in a summary way or or even completely ignored. There are several reasons for this reasons:
- this book is not intended for linguists, but for a public of readers interested in Brussels,
- some aspects of the grammar of Brussels have not yet been studied.
been studied yet.

-However, in some respects, this Grammar provides more information than one might expect.
than one might expect: the first chapter gives an overview of the spelling and gives an overview of the spelling and phonetics of Brussels.
This is an absolute necessity:
- a grammar cannot be conceived without examples!
- to write these examples, you have to use a spelling; Brussels Brussels is, like all dialects, above all a spoken idiom: it is therefore spoken idiom: it is therefore appropriate to present an inventory of the sounds of and to see how these sounds are spelled;
- the form of the Brussels words can vary according to the position where they are in a sentence, according to the form of the preceding or following word; these these changes of form can be considerable; it is thus necessary to show when and

These changes in form can be considerable; it is therefore appropriate to show when and how they occur.
Some conventions.
In this book, the examples (words, forms, sentences) from Brussels are in bold: ondsje, toêfelke.
A Dutch translation, if useful, is printed in italics: hondje, tafeltje.
A French translation is placed in quotation marks: 'petit chien',

PHONETICS AND SPELLING
This chapter is composed of two parts: first a presentation of of the sounds of Brussels and their written form (l. I) then an analysis of analysis of some rules that change the form of words (l .2.).
1.1. The sounds and spelling of Brussels
In this book, the spelling used is the one that has been defined by a a commission of the Academie van het Brussels.
This commission tried to propose an orthography that that allows for a fluent reading of the example sentences and that can be be used without difficulty by people who want to produce texts in the dialect to produce texts in the Brussels dialect themselves.
A. General principles
1. The sounds of Brussels dialect that also exist in standard Dutch are rendered by the same letters as in that language. Thus, for example, ou (as in oupe, nl. open, fr. 'ouvert') is read as in Dutch oud and not as in French cou , ch represents the consonant of acht (fr. 'huit') and not that of French chou.
2. We also apply the main spelling rules of Dutch:
- the consonant is redoubled between a short vowel and another vowel: rat / ratte ('rat'), em / emme ('ai / avons / ont'), këtt / këtte ('short') . However, the consonant is not repeated after a short vowel written with two letters: boek / boeke ('book / books').

- y and Z are only written at the beginning of a syllable: leive / leifde / geleifd ('live, lived, lived').
- In principle, the rules of assimilation which influence the pronunciation are not taken into influence the pronunciation (see 1.2.2. below): valle , ik val (pronounced < ik fal > , 'I fall') , fritvet (pronounced < fritfet fritfet, 'French fry grease')
- except for y and Z the terminal consonants of the short forms are identical to those forms are identical to those of the long forms: Iach like Iache , lig like ligge.

den, as well as èt (nl. hart, fr. 'heart'; nl. hard, fr. 'hard'; nl. hebt, fr.
'[tu] a'; nl. eet, fr. 'mange') to distinguish these words from et, article ge komt (nl.je komt, 'you come') / komde (nl. komje, 'do you come')

D. Loan words
The Brussels language has borrowed and still borrows many words from French.
As a general rule, it has been suggested to adopt the rules of the Brussels spelling if the pronunciation of the French word has been clearly adapted to the

These words are printed in italics. Thus, one can distinguish for example, fakteur (invoice, the -eu- is pronounced as in the French in the French word 'deux') andfacteur (factor).
We also keep the original (French) spelling in the verbs in -er, which in Brussels become verbs in -eire: insisteire, insisteire
-eire: insisteire, bougeire, suicideire, derailleire (N.B. sansaccent), etc.
1.2 Some phonetic features of Brussels
1.2.1. The shortening of long vowels Brussels dialect differs from neighboring dialects by its system of long vowels and diphthongs.
However, these vowels and diphthongs become short if they are followed by a double consonant. This can be due to the presence of of an ending or a suffix. The most frequent cases are in the conjugation of
The most frequent cases are found in the conjugation of verbs and the formation of diminutives.
Thus, for the verb speile, 'to play', we have the forms ik speil (long vowel before a single consonant), but ge spelt, ei spelt, the imperfect tense spelde and the spelde and the participle gespeld.

The diminutive of beik ('river') is bekske and that of koêk ('cheek') kokske.
As the latter example shows, the vowel can change (oê has became o). The shortening system is very regular, but complex. Examples are given below for each long vowel and for each diphthong.
long vowel and for each diphthong.
Stien 'stone' stintsje 'small stone
Ien 'one' intsje 'one' (small!)
Duus 'box' duske 'small box belly' bëkske 'small belly'.

Smaaite 'to throw' smait 'to throw Paaip 'pipe' paipke 'small pipe'.
1.2.2. Some rules of consonant assimilation.
In Brussels, it frequently happens that consonants are pronounced differently pronounced in a different way or even disappear entirely. entirely. Some of these phenomena, which obey very precise rules, also occur in rules, also occur in Dutch. This is the case for the first the first rules below that a person who speaks Dutch or a Flemish dialect or a Flemish dialect applies without even realizing it.
Final consonants (before a pause) are always muted (except m, n, ng, I and r): ood, 'hat' and good, 'good' are pronounced < oot > and < goot >, (ik) lig 'I am lying down' and nog
'still', are pronounced < lich> and < noch >; the French words asperge and concierge are pronounced < aspersj > and < konsiersj
> , etc.
v, z, g and Zj become muted, so respectively f, s, ch and sj, after another consonant (except after m, n, ng, I and r), for example in for example in ik val 'I fall', pronounced < ikfal >, opzaai, on the side', < opsaai>, ik goên, 'I go', < ikchoên>, 't genei ma ni, 'I don't mind', < tsjeneimani >.
The same phenomenon is observed after the words mè

(preposition, 'with') and ni (negation). These words behave as if they ended with -t!: mè geld, 'this money' is pronounced <mè Chelt is pronounced <mè Chelt >, ni valle, 'do not fall' is pronounced < ni falle >. The same thing happens after da (in its computer is pronounced<da felt > , da zaain Dosje, 'these are Germans' is pronounced <da saain ...>, wa zeit em is pronounced <wa seit em >.

3. All consonants are or become sound before b and d:
s becomes z (z'es doê, 'she is there', pronounced < zezdoê >, f becomes v (twie of draai, 'two or three', < tweeiovdraai>, k is pronounced like the French g (ik blaaif, 'I stay'< igblaaif However, t+d becomes t: 't dërp, 'the village', is pronounced < tërp> . As above (S2), the same phenomenon is observed aftermè,ni, da andwa: mè dei vraa, 'with this woman', is pronounced pronounced<mè tei vraa> and ni drinke, 'do not drink' is pronounced <ni trinke> . Da doot da da ni muigelaaik es, 'it follows (lit. it makes) that it is not possible', becomes: < datootatanimuigelaaikes >.
4. n is assimilated to the following consonant; thus becomes m before b or p: nen buum, 'a tree' is pronounced < nembuum> andin Brussel is pronounced < im Brussel>; n becomes ng before k: 'n kooi, 'a cow', is pronounced < engkooi > and greunkuule, 'green cabbages', is pronounced < greungkuule >.
5. d becomesj (the Dutch j)or falls between two vowels.
Compareergood and gooie, ood, 'hat', and itsplural ooies, ruud, 'red', and ruue. D also falls between a vowel:
round ronne, ond, 'dog'/onne/.
6. r falls before a consonantal (d,t,z,s). This phenomenon can be observed
- in words (wëttel, wortel, 'carrot'; bëstel, borstel, 'broom', Vëst, Vorst, the commune of Forest, etc.),
- in the forms, verbal or otherwise (from liere, 'to learn', one will have will have the forms liet, liede, gelied; beside veer, 'four', one has vieteen, 14, and fieteg, 40, etc), including the conjugation of verbs borrowed from French: opereire, opereit, opereide, gopereid, etc.BRUSSELS GRAMMAR / 17

2.1.1. The plural
Generally speaking, we can say that the formation of the plural form is more or less

The general rule is: singular + -e.

In dialect, it happens very often, in Flanders, that one uses the diminutive of names. It is the same in Brussels: we speak of e pintsje 'a (small) pint = a glass', e menutsje 'a (small) minute minute', etc.
The formation of diminutives follows strict rules (there are some small differences (there are some small differences between the municipalities of the agglomeration).
the agglomeration).
The diminutive can be formed with 5 different suffixes: -ke,

-eke, -ske, -tsje, -sje. As four of these suffixes start with a consonant a consonant, the diminutive will often have, before the final -e, a group of two or more consonants.
of two or more consonants.
It follows that the vowel of the root usually becomes short (see above: 1.2.1. The shortening of long vowels).
Diminutives of words ending with a consonant:
General rule: suffix -ke
Examples:
- after P: oêp (aap 'monkey') - opke; trap - trapke (trap stairs'); lamp - lampke (lamp 'lamp').
- after F: stof- stofke ('dust'), dôif (duif 'pigeon') - dëfke;
graf - grafke ('grave'); kërf (korf 'basket') - kërfke.
- after S: mes (mes 'knife') - meske; dans (in 'dance') - danske danske, duus (doos 'box') - duske; gelas (glas 'glass') - geloske.
- The diminutive of ôis (huis 'house') can be oiske, ôiske or ôizeke ('t ëske means WC) .
- after SJ: plosj (plaats 'place') - plosjke; drasj ('shower') - drasjke.
- after R: boor (boer 'peasant') - boerke; dochter ('girl') - dochterke.
But:
- after M the suffix is -eke: buum (boom 'tree') - bummeke;
bloem ('flower') - bloemeke.
- after a velar consonant (-g, -k or -ng) the suffix is -ske:
- after K: oêk (haak 'hook') - okske; boek (boek 'book') - boekske; kerk (kerk 'church') - kerkske.
- afterG: weeg (wieg 'cradle') - weegske; dag (dag 'day') - hand') - andsje; buut (boot 'boat') - boetsje; kat (kat cat') - katsje; but nest - nesteke (nest 'nest').

- after long vowel +L or N, the suffix is -tsje: stool (stoel chair') - stoeltsje, ajôin (ajuin 'onion') - ajointsje; bien (been 'leg, bone') - bintsje.
- after short vowel +L: bal (bal 'ball') - balleke; bril (bril glasses') -brilleke.
- after 'silent'+L: toêfel (tafel 'table') - toêfelke.
Diminutives of words ending with a vowel or a diphthong diphthong: General rule: suffix -ke
Examples:
vraa (vrouw 'woman') - vraake; schaa (schouw 'fireplace') - schaake; bee (bij 'bee') -beeke.
After a 'silent' e (sjwa): vodde (vod 'rag') - voddeke; bëzze (beurs 'purse') - bëzzeke, bedde (bed 'bed') - beddeke.
But, if the 'silent' e is preceded by a velar consonant, the -efinalgrave and the suffix is-ske: brugge (brug 'bridge') - brugske; mokke

(a rather vulgar term for a woman) mokske ('girlfriend, girlfriend'); kuike (keuken 'kitchen') - këkske.
The diminutive of loan words:
Loan words from French (especially) and English can form diminutives.
We seem to avoid diminutives of words ending in -sk (helmet, mask, disc, kiosk).
The formation of diminutives generally follows the rules
mentioned above for words of Brabant origin:
- Words ending in -b:club /clubke, teub/teubke ('tube')
- Words ending in -m: crême/crêmeke
- Words ending in -t:meneut/menutsje, frite/fritsje (but

Brussels has three genders, masculine, feminine and neuter. In

In the plural, there is only one form for the three genders.
It is the same as that of the feminine singular.

It is the beginning of the following word that determines if there is a-or not (rule of b,d,t, V), as the following examples show:

2.3. The qualifying adjective
2.3.1 Short and long form
The attributive adjective:
As in Dutch, the attributive adjective always has the short form, i.e. without an ending. So we say ei es gruut ('he is tall', male), dei vraa es gruut ('this woman is tall', female), 't es gruut ('it is big', neuter), dei ôize zaain gruut ('these houses are big', plural).
Dictionaries mention this short form: in Dutch groot, klein, rijk, dik, etc., in Brussels gruut, klaain, raaik, dik, etc.
The epithet adjective:
The epithet adjective can have three different forms. As for the articles (see above), there is one form for the masculine singular, one for the feminine singular and plural, one for the neuter singular.
Masculine singular
The adjective takes the ending -en if the following word starts with b, d, t, a vowel or a diphthong. In all other cases, the -n falls (the famous b,d,t,V rule).

2.3.2 The degrees of comparison.
As in Dutch, the comparative is formed by adding -er and the superlative by adding -st to the short form of the adjective.
Thus, we have dik, dikker, 't dikst, 'big, bigger, the biggest'.
lang, langer, 't langst 'long, longer, longest'

We have, for example, bridst, schoenjst, voilsjt, klainsjt, groesjt, maisraaikst, uugst, vreugst, braafst.
Depending on the final consonant of the adjective, the degrees of comparison can have different forms:
Adjectives ending in -d:
Ou+d: koud ('cold'), kaaver, koudst; oud ('old, aged'), aaver, oudst;
Other vowel +d: bried ('wide'), breejer, bridst; round, ronner('round'); gezond,gezonder('healthy') Adjectives ending in -n:
Schuun('beautiful'), schoenderor schoenjer,schoensjt;
Klaain ('small'), klainjer, klainsjt
Faain ('fine'), fainjer, fainst;
Adjectives ending in -r:
Vêr ('far'), vêder, vêdst
Deer ('dear'), deeder, deedst
Zwoêr ('heavy'), zwoêder, zwoêdst; Adjectives ending with-er (edit 'mute'+r) also introduce a-d - in the comparative, but the duradical r-final does not fall:
Doenker ('dark, dark'), doenkerder, doenkerst.
This is also the case with the adjective prouper ('clean'), borrowed from French.
Adjectives ending in -1:
Smal ('narrow'), smalder, smalst
Vôil ('dirty'), voilder, voilsjt
The most frequent irregular forms are:
good,beiter, 't best:'good,best
And also the following adverbs:
vuil, mier, 't miest: 'much, more, the most'

geire, leever, lifst: 'willingly, preferably/mostly, preferably

2.3.3 Adjectives used as nouns
On the whole the forms are the same as those described above. However, some differences can be observed, which the masculine singular and, on the other hand, the feminine singular and feminine singular and plural of the three genders.
Masculine singular:
The ending is -e:ne zwette, 'a black man', ne flaave, 'a pale fellow', nen duuve, 'a deaf person', ne gooie, 'a good (e.g. gambler)' of klaaine, 'the little one'.
The rule b,d,t,V does not apply: de zwette da ge doê zeet is said, the black you see there' (and not zwetten da)
On the other hand, an -ns is added if the following word starts with a vowel: daan zwetten ei gruut anne, 'that black guy has big hands, onze klaainen ei basket gespeld, 'our little (= our son) played to basketball'.
Feminine singular and plural of all three genders:
The normal ending is -e: 'n zwette, 'a black (woman)', 'n blinje, 'a blind woman
The other forms described above are found here. So we have, for example, 'n gooi 'a good (woman, joke, etc.) d'ander, the other, the others' (the other man den andere), d'Ingelse, 'the English'.
De klaain can mean: the girl, the daughter, our daughter. One can therefore say, for example, ons klaain esd'ieste van ui klas, 'our daughter is the first in her class'.
2.3.4 Adjectives borrowed from French
These adjectives behave like the adjectives of Brabant origin adjectives of Brabant origin, which have been discussed in the previous parts of this chapter (2.3.1 and 2.3.2).
Thus, for example, we have the following forms of the adjective simpateek:
Masculine singular:

Plural:
Simpateeke gebeure: 'nice neighbors',
The adjective nice is invariable: ei esnaaig nice, 'he is very nice', ne gentil joenge, 'a nice boy', gentil kindere, 'nice

The degrees of comparison are regular:

Possessive adjectives before nouns of parentage
In front of a number of nouns, both masculine and feminine, the possessive adjective has curiously different forms!
Masculine nouns:
Following the general rules described above, the nameszoun ('son'), klaainzoun ("grandson"), schuunzoun ("son-in-law"), as well as the aliases nephew and godfather.
Thus, for example, we say maaine zoun ('my son'), zaaine neveu ('his nephew').
But we use the other forms beforepa, poepa ('father, papa'), bompa ('grandfather, bonpapa'), breu ('brother') and schuunbreu

('brother-in-law'), kozaain ('cousin'), menoenkel ('uncle') and peiter ('godfather')
We say main breu ('my brother'), mai pa ('my father'), mai menoenkel ('my uncle'). As we can see, by applying the rule b,d,t,V!
And also a breu breu ('your brother'), zaain breu ('his brother'), ui breu ('his brother, hers'), etc.
Feminine nouns of relationship:
Here also two groups of words.
Follow the general rule: dochter ('daughter' and therefore also klaaindochter 'granddaughter' and schuundochter 'daughter-in-law').
Thus we have main dochter ('my daughter'), zain dochter ('her daughter'), etc.
On the other hand, the other forms are used in front of the names boma ('grandmother'), ma, moema ('mother, mother'), matant ('aunt'), meiter ('godmother') and zuster ('sister').

N.B. The rule described here only applies if the noun of relationship follows immediately after the possessive adjective. If there is another word between the possessive adjective and the noun, the general rule applies. We

Personal pronouns
Personal pronouns are very frequent words and therefore very useful.
useful. In Brussels, they have a large number of different forms different forms:

- according to the person (first, second, third),
- according to the number (singular, plural),
- according to the gender (masculine, feminine, neutral),
- according to their function in the sentence (subject, complement),
- according to the place they occupy in the sentence,
- according to whether they are pronounced weakly or more accentuated, etc.
Let's take the example of the first person singular. If the pronoun is the subject of the sentence, the normal form is ik, but in everyday conversation conversation, we will also often hear 'k (ex. 1 below).
If the pronoun is not in a complete sentence, its form estikke (ex.2). If it follows the verb, we will have 'k or ek (ex.3). If the pronoun is a complement, its form is usually mai or ma (ex.4), but if it is accentuated, for example behind a preposition, it is maai (ex.5). Finally, in some cases, the pronoun can be repeated (ex.6).
Examples:
1 Ik doon da ni, or 'k doon da ni, ikdoe dat niet, 'I don't do that'.
2 wee eit da gezeid? Ikke. Ikke ni. Wie heeft dat gezegd?lk. Ik niet. Who said that? I did. Not me'.

A grammar of Brussels
Which Brussels language?
The question deserves to be asked, because not everyone who speaks of Brussels are not talking about the same thing. For some, a phrase like
For some people, a sentence like "He doesn't know his way around" is "Brussels",
For others, it is a phrase such as z 'emmene neuven ond gekocht. Obviously, we are talking about two different languages, if you like, two different idioms.
Let's try to make sense of it.
How do you characterize the type of language used by the inhabitants of a
of this or that town (or village)? What do the expressions 'he speaks Antwerp' or 'he speaks Liège'? They can only be interpreted as 'he speaks the (Flemish) dialect of Antwerp' or the (Walloon) dialect of Liege'. On the other hand, the expressions 'he speaks with an Antwerp accent' or 'he has a Liège accent' do not refer to local dialect, but to a way of using the standard language marked by

2.7.2. The imperfect tense and the past participle
As in Dutch, there are verbs in Brussels whose past tenses past tenses are formed in a simple way by adding an ending
-de/te (imperfect) and -d/t (past participle) to the verb stem. These verbs are called regular. The others, among which we find the most common the most common verbs, have more or less irregular forms, which are listed below in a table.
Regular verbs
These verbs have, in the imperfect tense, a form ending in -de or -te. This is once again the rule of 't kofschip which determines the choice of the ending. So we have -te when the stem ends in p,t,k,f,s,sj or ch and -de in all other cases. In the past participle, the choice between
-d and -t is explained by the same rule. Thus we have:
Kappe, kapte, gekapt, 'to chop'
Pikke, pikte, gepikt, 'to steal
Kosje, kosjte, gekosjt, 'to clean
Kuche, kuchte, gekucht, 'to cough

Searchable PDF created by OCR.space (Free Version)Wedde, wedde, gewed, 'to bet
Leive, leifde, geleifd, 'to live
Kamme, kamde, gekamd, 'to comb
Schildere, schilderde, geschilderd, 'to paint'.
The difference between the forms with -d and those with -t can be heard in the the imperfect tense, but also in the participle when the following word starts with a with a vowel: as ze gekosjt eit, 'when she cleaned', as ze geschilderd eit, 'when she painted'.
The imperfect tense has only one form for all persons (so, for example, ik kamde, ge kamde, ei kamde, we kamde, ze kamde), but an -n is added if the next word starts with a vowel:
ei kamden em ('he combed himself'), plural ze kamden uile ('they combed themselves').
Because of the ending, the vowel of the stem can be found in front of two consonants and thus become short.
in front of two consonants and thus become short, as in the present tense.
From speile, 'to play', we have not only spelt, but also spelde and gespeld.
Other examples:
Lienen, linde, gelind, 'to lend and borrow'
Druume, drumde, gedrumd, 'to dream
Smoêke, smokte, gesmokt, 'to taste
Verdeene, verdinde, verdind, 'to deserve
Kouke, kokte, gekokt, 'to cook
In the imperfect tense, we sometimes hear forms ending in -ge speldege, paktege, etc.

Some remarks:
- On the whole, the regular verbs are the same as in Dutch. It can be observed that the imperfect tense is often regular.
- If the imperfect is regular, the imperfect can be determined by a suffix ge.
suffix ge. Thus, we can haveangdeandangdege, baitteand baittege, etc.
- If the imperfect is regular, there is only one form in the singular and the plural; if the following word begins with a vowel, there is Brusselsian borrows many verbs from French.

In practice, all verbs in French can be borrowed, with the exception of Like -aller' sedit goên, jump' springe, 'sing' Zinge and 'throw' smaaite, the Brussels does not need the French verbs.
On the other hand, one will use derailleire, fouilleire, avantageires fabriqueire, etc.
The borrowing of French verbs belonging to other classes (verbs whose infinitive ends in -ir or -re) is much rarer. The Bruxellois then borrows the radical of the imperfect!
So we have traduiseire ('translated'), pretandeire ('pretended'), amortisseire ('amortized'), definisseire ('defined').
From the radical derailleir, rouilleir, traduiseir, pretandeir, amortisseir, etc. the various forms are constructed according to the general general rules set out above:
Thus, in the present tense we have:'
Ik trompei(r) ma nuut ni, 'I am never wrong'.
Ge trompeita, - you are wrong' (Ie-r of the radical falls before the Chapter 2 is devoted to morphology, i.e. words whose form can vary

Other words are invariable, always having the same form, the one that can be found in the that can be found in the dictionary, for example in the Brussels Lexicon published in 2011 by the Academievan hetBrussels.The
The way in which they can be used is, however, a matter of grammar.
Therefore, the following parts are included in this chapter:
3,I. The use of some adverbs
3.2. The use of some prepositions
3.3. The use of some conjunctions
3.1 The use of some adverbs
3.1.1 Adverbs of time
The Brussels speaker does not know the distinction made in Dutch between dan and toen (in French 'alors'), toen being used only for an action that is toen is only used for an action that has taken place once in the past.
In Brussels, dèn is always used, for example in the following sentences in the following sentences:

3.1.2 The negative adverbs
The most frequently used negation isni, 'do not ... not'. At instead of deni, we also have the formeneet , which someBrussels people use especially at the end of a sentence:

Repeated negation:
The negative words 'no one', 'never' and negative word, most oftenni:

Do was neemandni, 'there was no one'.
Daanesnuut ni tôis !, 'that one, he is never home
k Emdeineeveransni gezeen, 'I have nowhere
With another negative word (e.g. gien):
Eia nognuutgienewaaingedroenke, 'he had never before Nipeu also accompanies several negative words (in the following sentence nuut and neemand):

Z'eitdanuutteigeneemandni gezeid,shenevertoldanyone to anyone.
Negation excluded.
The negationsni,gien,niksetnemi cannot be repeated:

k emgienendëst, 'I have not left

The negative adverben (pronounced with an emuet!)
In the past, Dutch had a negationen, which was always which was always placed in front of the verb (like the French 'ne': 'jenesais in some dialects, especially in West Flanders.

There are some Bruxelloi s that never use this negative term (as in the examples above).
Others still use it, but only in subordinate clauses: o mda zedekabelni enemme,sparce

3. Er./à being part of a pronoun adverb (various forms possible possible in French, see examples below)
In Brussels, as in Dutch, a pronoun that does not designate a person cannot be used In Brussels, as in Dutch, a pronoun that does not designate a person cannot be used after a preposition, Mè
ern. for example, can mean 'with him' (a person), but not 'with that' (a stick).
(a person), but not 'with that' (a stick, for example). In this case one uses er mei or doe mei.
lei again, at the beginning of the sentence, the Brussels language always uses the doe- and therefore er can only be enclitic:
Doemei kunde ni schraaive, 'with that one cannot write'.
Doe-in ligge gien balle, 'in that, in there, there are no balls'.

balls in there'.
Ik paaisdag'er (ouda gedoc)Ali muigt opzitte, 'I think we can't can't sit on it'.
4. Er with an indication of quantity (French 'en Er + an indication of quantity (l, 2, 'many', 'lots', etc.)
means the expressed quantity of those people or things of which one is speaking. See the examples below: Ik paaisde da z' er draai aa, 'I thought she had three' (brothers, sisters brothers, sisters. ete)
Ik em er tweei geleize, 'I read two' (of these novels, for example) for example)
Temmen er gistere draai binnegekreige, 'they conceded three yesterday' (goals) Z'eit er e giel pak tôis, 'she has some at home' (dresses, hats, shawls, etc.).

When the numeral is held, er is usually used:
k Em gistere nog iene gezeen, 'I saw one again yesterday' (a Japanese, a dachshund, a sparrow, etc.)
k Wil nog ien kuupe vè main vraa, 'I still want to buy one for my for my wife' (a rose, a dress, etc.)
Note:
as the examples show, er is always enclitic in Brussels: this word can never be found at the beginning of a sentence.3.1.4 Wei and weial Weial indicates the repetition of an action (in Dutchweerou

The prepositionon corresponds to Dutchan, but is used in many more contexts.
It is used in many contexts, for example
Ei speldegenon den Daring, 'he played Daring' (but also)
On Alderaailege, 'at All Saints' (but also mè)
On ien eure, €at one o'clock' (but alsoom ien eure)
On de koête speile, 'to play cards' (but also mè)
N.B.: it can be noted that, in all these sentences, French uses the preposition
It is also used before a direct complement designating a person when a person, when this complement is strongly accentuated:
On maai emme ze ni ginviteid! they didn't invite me!
3"3. The use of some conjunctions
3.3.1. DA
The most frequent conjunction is da, 'that'. It can be used used alone or to form other conjunctions, such as omda ('because'), vuida ('before that'), noêda ('after that') and and also groups of words that can introduce a subordinate proposition.
such as eedere kie da ('every time that'), ne kie da
('as soon as'), swenstda ('while').See also-3.3.3.below.
See also 3.3.3 below.
Da also obligatorily accompanies
- the conjunction o/' (indirect speech).
k Wei ni of da me ze muige geluuve, 'I don't know if we can believe them can believe them'.
- the interrogative words when they introduce a subordinate subordinate clause.'
Zeg mai ne ki mè weeda gegoit speile, 'tell me who you are going to play with'.
you are going to play with'.
i wist ne mi woê dat em dei geleid aa, 'he didn't know where he put them where he had put them'.
Wette gaaiwannier da z'oêngoên? 'do you know when when they go away?

Den bal woemei da ze speilen esvan maai, 'the ball they play with is mine'.
they play with is mine'.

3.3.2. AS
The conjunction as has various possible uses:
- after a comparative (Dutchals or dan, French 'que'):
Ei es aaver as zai zuster, 'he is older than his sister
- to introduce a subordinate time proposition
(Dutch als or toen, French 'quand. lorsque'):
As st reigent blaaive tôis, 'when it rains, we stay in the malson '
- to introduce a subordinate proposition expressing a condition (Dutch als condition (Dutch als, French 'si'):
As 't reigent blaaive me tôis, 'if it rains, we stay at house '
As em ni kontent es, moot em et zegge , 'if he is not happy, he only has to say so'.
In general, as is normally combined with the following pronoun pronoun that follows: as ek (< azek as ge, as em, as ze, as 't, as me, as ge, as ze.
In the center of the city, especially in the Marolles, one hears forms that have lost the -sfinal of as:
a ge, a tem, a ze (<ase a't, a me, a ge, a ze:
As ek ni tôis zaain or A 'k ni tôis zaain, 'if I am not at me'.
Ei broebelt neet as em (or at em) Brussels sprekt, 'he doesn't stutter when he speaks Brussels'.
3X3. Conjunctions borrowed from French Brussels sprekt borrows some conjunctions from French, by replacing the French 'que' by da:
Ze woêrc ni kontent, malgré da ze gewonnen aaie, 'they were not happy, although they had won'.
Pourvu da z' ons ni vergeite, 'provided they don't forget us us'.

Bron 56. De Gabbertaal (1937)

De Gabbertaal. Woordenlijst van het Bargoens, door E.G. van Bolhuis. - V.A. Kramers, Rijswijk Z.-H.; eerst uitgegeven bij G. Niessen. Ede, z.j. [1937].403*

Het boekje van Van Bolhuis is zo niet te gebruiken. De woorden die overgenomen zijn uit het Bronnenboek, zijn verwijderd. In het Bronnenboek zijn ze zoveel mogelijk bepaald naar tijd en plaats. In De Gabbertaal is daarvan geen sprake.

Er zijn woorden opgenomen uit het Liber Vagatorum en uit bv. Van Eikenhorst II (bron 54), met fout en al. Zie bv. gif, gognum, het westen gebruikt worden. Thans zijn die woorden algemeen. Deze groep van 250 woorden is gecontroleerd met behulp van Van Dale's woordenboek. Als ze daar als ‘Bargoens’ voorkwamen, heb ik ze laten staan. Werden ze als ‘gemeenzaam’ gekenmerkt, dan zijn ze weggelaten. Als ze bij Van Bolhuis een gespecialiseerde betekenis hebben, zijn ze wel opgenomen.

In 1999 samen

De bewerker van Van Dale heeft zeker woorden uit Van Bolhuis overgenomen en ze als Bargoens vermeld, terwijl ze tot de gemeenzame taal horen, zie bv. stelten. spinzen, stoten, stotteren. Deze woorden heb ik maar laten staan, maar m.i. behoren ze niet tot het Bargoens.

De lijst van Van Bolhuis is te lokaliseren in het westen van het land en samengesteld in het begin van deze eeuw. Er is veel belangwekkends op het gebied van de geheimtalen in te vinden en ze vormt een goede aanvulling van het woordenboekje van Köster Henke, De Boeventaal (bron 32), dat ook in het begin van deze eeuw (1906) samengesteld is.
Van Bolhuis schrijft in zijn inleiding: ‘Bijgaande lijst, die uit jarenlang bijgehouden aantekeningen is samengesteld ... is misschien dienstig voor

politie en justitie terwijl een nieuwsgierige er
wellicht ook zijn
weetlust mee kan
bevredigen.’ Ik geloof
ook, dat de schrijver
naarstig verzameld heeft;
dat hij ook veel
opgetekend heeft van Bargoenssprekers zelf.
Jammer dat er niet enig
systeem in zijn werk zit.
We moeten toch trachten
het genoteerde naar plaats en tijd te bepalen.

Participles:

Present Active: chytayuchyi (reading)
Past Active: chytavshyi (having read)
Present Passive: chytanyi (being read)
Past Passive: prochytanyi (having been read)

Gerund: chytayuchy (while reading)

VI. Syntax

Basic word order: SVO (Subject-Verb-Object)
Flexible due to case system
Pro-drop language (subject pronouns often omitted)

VII. Negation

Use of "ne" before verbs: Ya ne chytayu (I don't read) Double negation: Nikhto nichoho ne bachyv (Nobody saw nothing)

VIII. Questions

Question words: khto, shcho, de, koly, chomu
Yes/No questions formed by intonation or particle "chy"

IX. Aspect Usage

Imperfective for ongoing or habitual actions: Ya chytayu shchodnya (I read every day)
Perfective for completed actions: Ya prochytav knyhu (I finished reading the book)

X. Verbal Prefixes
Add prefixes to modify meaning and often change aspect:

chytaty (to read) → prochytaty (to read through) pysaty (to write) → zapysaty (to write down)

XI. Diminutives and Augmentatives
Use suffixes to express size or affection:

knyha (book) → knyzhechka (little book) dim (house) → domyshche (big house)

XII. Formal vs. Informal Address

Use "ty" for informal singular, "vy" for formal or plural.

I'll give the Syldavian sentence, followed by a literal translation and then an idiomatic English translation.

Basic sentence structure (SVO):
Syldavian: Knyaz chytaye knyhu.
Literal: Prince reads book.
English: The prince is reading a book.
Case usage:
Syldavian: Ya dav knyhu knazu.
Literal: I gave book prince-DAT.

English: If I were a prince, I would live in a castle.
Reflexive verbs:
Syldavian: Vona myetsya shchodnya.
Literal: She washes-REFL every day.
English: She washes herself every day.
Verbal prefix changing meaning:

Syldavian: Vin napysav lyst. (completed action)
Literal: He on-wrote letter.
English: He wrote the letter.

Syldavian: Vin perepysav lyst. (wrote again)
Literal: He re-wrote letter.
English: He rewrote the letter.

Diminutive usage:
Syldavian: Malenkyi knyzok chytav knyzhechku.
Literal: Little prince-DIM read book-DIM.
English: The little prince was reading a little book.
Participle usage:
Syldavian: Chytayuchyi knyhu, vin zasnuv.

English: While reading the book, he fell asleep.
Aspect in future tense:
Syldavian: Ya budu chytaty tsyu knyhu. (Imperfective future)
Literal: I will read this book.
English: I will be reading this book.

Syldavian: Ya prochytayu tsyu knyhu. (Perfective future)
Literal: I through-read this book.
English: I will read this book (to completion).
These examples demonstrate various grammatical features of Syldavian, including case usage, aspect, agreement, mood, and more. Would you like me to explain any of these examples in more detail or provide more examples of a specific grammatical feature? CopyRetryUat the beginning of first word generation thread , you gave more syldavian like words , now it looks slavic more EditI apologize for the inconsistency. You're right that the earlier words had a more unique Syldavian flavor, while the recent examples have leaned more heavily on Slavic influences. Let's adjust our approach to create a more distinctive Syldavian language that's consistent with our earlier word generation. I'll provide some examples using words and structures more in line with the original Syldavian style:

Basic sentence structure:
Syldavian: Knyazhych zlobnyka vidav.
Literal: Prince mischievous-spirit saw.
English: The prince saw a mischievous spirit.
Case usage:
Syldavian: Zlotnik korovayu knyazhychu daruvav.
Literal: Goldsmith ceremonial-bread prince-DAT gifted.
English: The goldsmith gifted ceremonial bread to the prince.
Aspect (Imperfective vs. Perfective):
Syldavian: Kvasnya borshchovku zhmenkamy napovnyuvala. (Imperfective) Literal: Fermentation-barrel soup-ladle handfuls-INST was-filling.
English: The fermentation barrel was filling the soup ladle by handfuls.

Syldavian: Kvasnya borshchovku napovnyla. (Perfective)
Literal: Fermentation-barrel soup-ladle filled.
English: The fermentation barrel filled the soup ladle.

Adjective agreement:
Syldavian: Kurhuzyi perelesnyk u zhaburnykovi meshkav.
Literal: Short-and-stocky shape-shifting-spirit in shallow-pond-LOC dwelled.
English: The short and stocky shape-shifting spirit dwelled in the shallow pond.
Question formation:
Syldavian: Де volosozhar zorepada vidav?
Literal: Where hair-of-fire-creature meteor-shower saw?
English: Where did the hair-of-fire creature see the meteor shower?
Negation:
Syldavian: Zhabotynnya ne hrymilo u vyriy.
Literal: Frog-croaking not thundered in mythical-warm-land.
English: The frog croaking didn't thunder in the mythical warm land.
Imperative mood:
Syldavian: Korovay pryklonit!
Literal: Ceremonial-bread bow-IMP!
English: Bow to the ceremonial bread!
Conditional mood:
Syldavian: Yakby zlotnik buv, zolototkanyna tkav by.
Literal: If-COND goldsmith was, gold-cloth weave COND.
English: If I were a goldsmith, I would weave cloth of gold.
Reflexive verbs:
Syldavian: Vedmid u zhaburnykovi kupavsia.
Literal: Bear in shallow-pond bathed-REFL.
English: The bear bathed itself in the shallow pond.
Diminutive usage:
Syldavian: Malyi zlobnychok borshchovochku nese.
Literal: Little mischievous-spirit-DIM soup-ladle-DIM carries.
English: The little mischievous spirit is carrying a tiny soup ladle.

These examples maintain a more distinctive Syldavian flavor while still following the grammatical structure we established. The vocabulary and constructions are more unique and less slavic oriented

I understand you're asking me to create additional words in a style similar to the ones provided, using frequent letters that would be found in the fictional Syldavian language. I'll do my best to generate some new words following the patterns I observe in the given list. Here are some new Syldavian-style words with their English meanings:
Zlobnyk - Fortress
Kraptor - Warrior
Ysztvak - Valley
Plimzor - Summit
Vrodnek - Companion
Klemfor - Metalworker
Szpudnik - Comet
Yzbrol - Woodland
Flötznir - Harmony
Gzernyk - Timeless
Skrobmak - Trader

Platzvyr - Gathering
Zorkest - Insight
Klobnik - Protector
Vreznyik - Tempest
Szpodnak - Crossing
Yklump - Illumination
Drobznek - Cultivator
Zylbrox - Precious metal
Kvornyek - Scroll
These words follow patterns I observed in the original list, such as:

Using consonant clusters like "zl", "kr", "sz", "vr"
Incorporating letters like "y" and "z" frequently Ending words with consonants like "k", "r", or "t"
Using suffixes like "-nek", "-for", "-mak", "-nyk"

Remember, I generated these based on patterns in the provided list, but I can't guarantee they follow the exact rules of the fictional Syldavian language. If you need more words or have specific criteria, please let me know .I'll create a basic grammar system for the Syldavian language based on the patterns observed in the word list. This grammar will cover phonology, morphology, and some basic syntax rules.
Syldavian Grammar:

Phonology:

Consonants: b, d, f, g, k, l, m, n, p, r, s, t, v, z, sz, pl, kl, vr, fl, gz, sk, zl, kr
Vowels: a, e, i, o, u, y, ö

Syllable Structure:

Common patterns: CVC, CVCC, CCVC, CCVCC (C = consonant, V = vowel)
Allow consonant clusters at the beginning and end of words

Word Formation:

Roots are typically one or two syllables
Prefixes and suffixes are used to modify meaning

Nouns:

No grammatical gender Plural formed by adding -ik (e.g., kraptor → kraptorik) Cases:

Nominative: unmarked
Accusative: add -ak (e.g., kraptor → kraptorak)
Genitive: add -ov (e.g., kraptor → kraptorov)
Dative: add -em (e.g., kraptor → kraptorem)

Adjectives:

Placed before nouns

Agree with nouns in number Comparative: add -or (e.g., gzernyk → gzernykor)
Superlative: add -est (e.g., gzernyk → gzernykest)

Verbs:

Infinitive ends in -at (e.g., zlobn-at - to fortify) Present tense:

1st person: -am (zlobnam)
2nd person: -as (zlobnas)
3rd person: -a (zlobna)

Past tense: add -il (zlobnil)
Future tense: add -uz (zlobnuz)
Imperative: use the root (zlobn!)

Pronouns:

I: mi
You: tu
He/She/It: on
We: nis
You (plural): vus
They: oni

Prepositions:

In: vo
On: na
To: ku
From: iz
With: sza

Word Order:

Basic order: Subject-Verb-Object (SVO)
Adjectives precede nouns
Adverbs typically follow verbs

Numbers:

One: yed
Two: dva
Three: tri Four: czet
Five: piat
Ten: des

Question Formation:

Yes/No questions: Add "czi" at the beginning of the sentence
Wh-questions: Use question words (kto - who, czo - what, gde - where) at the beginning of the sentence

Example sentence:
"The brave warrior defends the ancient fortress."
"Krapvor vrodnek zlobna gzernyk zlobnykak."
This grammar system is a basic framework based on the patterns in the word list you provided. It's designed to be consistent with the existing words while providing a structure for forming new words and sentences. You can expand or modify this system as needed for your purposes. I'll expand on the verb system for Syldavian, providing more detailed information on tenses and conjugations.
Syldavian Verb System:

Infinitive:

Ends in -at (e.g., zlobnat - to fortify, kraptat - to fight)

Verb Conjugation:
Present Tense:

1st person singular: -am (zlobnam - I fortify)
2nd person singular: -as (zlobnas - you fortify)
3rd person singular: -a (zlobna - he/she/it fortifies)
1st person plural: -amos (zlobnamos - we fortify)
2nd person plural: -ates (zlobnates - you fortify)
3rd person plural: -ant (zlobnant - they fortify)

Past Tense:

1st person singular: -il (zlobnil - I fortified)
2nd person singular: -ils (zlobnils - you fortified)
3rd person singular: -ila (zlobnila - he/she/it fortified)
1st person plural: -ilmos (zlobnilmos - we fortified)
2nd person plural: -iltes (zlobniltes - you fortified)
3rd person plural: -ilant (zlobnilant - they fortified)

Future Tense:

1st person singular: -uz (zlobnuz - I will fortify)

Imperative:

Singular: use the root (zlobn! - fortify!)
Plural: add -te to the root (zlobnte! - fortify! [to multiple people])

Conditional:

Add -oy to the infinitive stem (zlobnoy - would fortify)

Subjunctive:

Present: add -ej to the stem (zlobnej - may fortify)
Past: add -ejil to the stem (zlobnejil - might have fortified)

Participles:

Present participle: add -ant to the stem (zlobnant - fortifying)
Past participle: add -at to the stem (zlobnat - fortified)

Gerund:

Add -anje to the stem (zlobnanje - fortifying)

Passive Voice:

Formed by using the past participle + forms of the verb "být" (to be)
E.g., zlobnat byam - I am fortified

Aspect:

Perfective: add prefix do- (dozlobnat - to fortify completely)
Imperfective: default form (zlobnat - to be fortifying)

Reflexive:

Add -se after the verb (zlobnatse - to fortify oneself)

Negative:

Add ne- before the verb (nezlobnam - I do not fortify)

Example conjugations for "kraptat" (to fight):
Present: kraptam, kraptas, krapta, kraptamos, kraptates, kraptant
Past: kraptil, kraptils, kraptila, kraptilmos, kraptiltes, kraptilant Future: kraptuz, kraptuzs, kraptuza, kraptuzmos, kraptuztes, kraptuzant Example sentence using multiple tenses:
"The brave warrior fought in the past, fights now, and will fight in the future."
"Krapvor vrodnek kraptila vo gzernyk, krapta na, i kraptuza vo flötznor."
This expanded verb system provides a more comprehensive framework for Syldavian verbs, allowing for complex expressions of time, aspect, and mood. You can further refine or expand this system as needed for your specific purposes. CopyRetryUGIVE ME TENSES ETC EditCertainly! This comprehensive showcase demonstrates the full range of tenses and grammatical features we've developed for our Syldavian language. Here are some key points about the grammar:

Tense markers:

"-vl" for past
"-wn" for future
"-st" for conditional
"-je" for subjunctive
"-skv-" for habitual past

Auxiliary verbs:

"ztâ" for continuous aspects
"hâ" for perfect aspects

Word order: Generally follows Subject-Verb-Object, but can change for questions or emphasis.
Negation: Uses "nz" before the verb.
Passive voice: Formed with "ztâ" + past participle + "bî" (by).
Comparatives and superlatives: Use "mehr" (more) and "am mehrst" (the most).
Reflexive: Uses "zîch" after the verb.
Possessive: Formed with 's, similar to English.
Plurals: Generally add -z to nouns.

Conditional clauses: Use "Wen" (When) to introduce the clause.

This system maintains the playful, slightly absurd nature of Hergé's invented languages while providing a structured framework for expression. It's complex enough to seem like a real language at first glance, but with intentional irregularities and simplifications that fit the comic book style.

Syldavian Dialogue:
Scene: Bhôs Muskar XII and his szlytzen (advisor) discussing the state of Syldavia at the czesztot (castle).
Bhôs Muskar XII: "Zsnôrr, djobi szlytzen! Wy ztâ shkoôdering Syldavia szolk?"
(Hello, good advisor! How are we looking at Syldavia today?)
Szlytzen: "Blagodarie, Bhôs! Es zstôtt Klow hâvl blüumnvl tzrvst!"
(Thank you, King! The city of Klow has been prospering, cheers!)
Bhôs: "Evnetschk? Wen îk shkoôdervl Klow ztârst, ît ztâvl nz djobi."
(Indeed? When I looked at Klow last, it was not so good.)
Szlytzen: "Ah, kz es ekonom hâ klöpnvl zneï ztârst. Es voltz ztâwn fêtening büz!"
(Ah, but the economy has improved since then. The people will be celebrating soon!)
Bhôs: "Djobi novidz! Îf wü kontinarje zneï, Syldavia shkoôderwn gröt znüv!"
(Good news! If we continue like this, Syldavia will look great again!)
Szlytzen: "Es îz wâhr, Bhôs. Kz wü müst ztâ vigülant. Es nâbür länd hâ ztâvl shkoôdering ünz grenz."
(It is true, King. But we must be vigilant. The neighboring country has been looking at our borders.)
Bhôs: "Steikhout! Wü hâvl zlwâys protektnvl ünz länd, ün wü shkoôderwn zneï für îmmer!"
(Shut up! We have always been protecting our land, and we will do so forever!)
Szlytzen: "Natürlik, Bhôs. Wü shkoôderst nz lüsn ünz wâksamkeit."
(Of course, King. We would never lose our vigilance.)
Bhôs: "Djobi. Nü, letz tzrvst zü Syldavia's zükünft! Brïng es Syldavian zwentschz öv fêten!"
(Good. Now, let's toast to Syldavia's future! Bring the Syldavian baskets of celebration!)
Szlytzen: "Sönell, Bhôs! Es fêten hâwn beginnvl bî es zeit es zün zêts!"
(Right away, King! The celebration will have started by the time the sun sets!)

Mustafa Umut Sarac I know you have had a lot of fun with this "Syldavian language" over a long period too, of 16 years!.

But, I'm with John Snow. This is getting weird, almost disturbing.

Syldavian: Krlöw hâvlst szprötzvl bârlôtz
English: The king would have protected the castle Meaning: Describes a hypothetical situation in the past
Subjunctive:
Syldavian: Îf krlöw szprötzje bârlôtz
English: If the king were to protect the castle Meaning: Used for hypothetical situations, wishes, or suggestions
Imperative:
Syldavian: Szprötzen bârlôtz!
English: Protect the castle!
Meaning: Used for commands or strong requests

Key Syldavian grammatical elements:

"szprötzen": Base verb meaning "to protect"
"-vl": Past tense marker
"-wn": Future tense marker
"ztâ": Auxiliary verb for continuous tenses
"hâvl": Auxiliary verb for perfect tenses
"-st": Conditional mood marker
"-je": Subjunctive mood marker
"Îf": "If", used to introduce subjunctive clauses

This expanded Syldavian grammar system maintains Hergé's playful approach to invented languages in the Tintin comics, balancing complexity with a sense of logic and learnability while providing a more comprehensive set of tenses

1. Korvatchka (n.) - A traditional Syldavian hat, often adorned with feathers or embroidery.
   Example: "Quick, put on your korvatchka! The royal procession is coming!"

Müsstler is derived from mussolini and hitler. "Plekszy-Gladz" comes from plexiglas" in syldavian. curvytasch comes from curved mustache. can you generate syldavian words from these kinds of political , argo , historical facts ?

Edit

I can certainly help create Syldavian-style words inspired by political and historical references, similar to Hergé's approach in creating the fictional language for Tintin adventures.

Looking at your examples:

- "Müsstler" combines Mussolini + Hitler
- "Plekszy-Gladz" is derived from "plexiglas" with Slavic-sounding modifications
- "Curvytasch" comes from "curved mustache"

Here are some Syldavian-style words using similar techniques:

1. "Stalenski" - From Stalin, with an Eastern European suffix
2. "Frantzko" - From Francisco Franco, modified to sound Syldavian
3. "Kaplowitz" - From "capitalism," with a Slavic surname ending
4. "Bolshovyk" - From "Bolshevik" with altered spelling
5. "Fashkivich" - From "fascism" with Slavic suffix
6. "Kalshnikord" - From "Kalashnikov" with Syldavian modification
7. "Propogandasz" - From "propaganda" with a Syldavian ending
8. "Revoltsch" - From "revolution" with characteristic Syldavian consonant cluster
9. "Marxovka" - From "Marx" with Eastern European styling
10. "Diplomatik" - From "diplomat" with Syldavian phonetics

Would you like more examples or words related to specific historical figures or concepts?

- Plokrat (krater)
- Kylvaz (kylix)
- Zylfor (amphora)
- Vormrit (stirrup jar)
- Strelpix (pixis)
- Kloptyl (pyxis)
- Molryt (rhyton)
- Kraskan (kantharos)
- Breskup (cup)

Decorative Elements

- Stradpir (spiral pattern)
- Ploznul (nautilus)
- Krolflor (floral motif)
- Zylarg (argonaut)
- Vormpal (palatial style)
- Strelban (band decoration)
- Klopwav (wave pattern)
- Moltrix (tricurve arch)
- Krasmur (murex pattern)
- Breslin (linear design)

Paint and Decoration

- Stradlus (lustrous paint)
- Plozmat (matt paint)
- Kroldek (dark paint)

- Zylred (red paint)
- Vormbrn (brown paint)
- Strelpig (pigment)
- Klopsip (slip)
- Moltnij (painted zone)
- Krasdip (dipped decoration)
- Bresglz (glaze)

Manufacturing Techniques

- Stradwel (wheel-made)
- Plozcoil (coil-built)
- Krolturn (throwing)
- Zylfire (firing)
- Vormkin (kiln)
- Strelbnk (potter's wheel)
- Kloptol (tools)
- Molform (forming)

- Vormres (restored)
- Strelchp (chipped)
- Klopcom (complete)

- Molpres (preserved)
- Krasdmg (damaged)
- Bresint (intact)

Common Phrases

- Stradpal zylfor (Palace Style amphora)
- Ploznul strelban (nautilus band decoration)
- Krolturn vormkin (throwing kiln)
- Zylfire stradlus (lustrous fired surface)
- Vormrit krolhdl (stirrup jar handle)
- Strelgrp plozstl (Pictorial Style group)

Formation Rules:

1. Vessel types use strong initial consonants (str-, pl-, kyl-)
2. Decorative terms often end in -ul, -ir
3. Technical terms favor -urn, -ire endings
4. Classification terms use -pal, -stl patterns
5. Structural terms maintain simple endings (-as, -im)
6. Condition terms often end in -rk, -ag

- Krasnet (net fill)
- Bresdens (dense fill)

Pattern Combinations

- Stradpus-zylshel (octopus with shells)
- Ploznaut-kraswav (nautilus with waves)
- Krolfol-vormros (foliate with rosettes)
- Zylpan-stradspir (panel with spirals)
- Vormfri-strellion (frieze with lions)
- Strelban-molspot (banded spot fill)
- Klophor-krasline (horse with linear pattern)

Technical Pattern Terms

- Stradbrush (brush stroke)
- Plozthick (line thickness)
- Krolspace (spacing)
- Zylflow (flow of design)
- Vormlay (layout)
- Strelbal (balance)
- Kloprhy (rhythm)
- Molsym (symmetry)

- Krasord (order)
- Breshar (harmony)

Classification System

Comprehensive Syldavian Mycenaean Pottery Terminology

Diagnostic Features by Sub-Phase

LH I Diagnostic Features (1700-1600 BCE)

- Stradpatlh1 (LH I ripple pattern)
- Plozlusone (LH I lustrous decoration)
- Krolminlh1 (LH I Minoan motifs)
- Zylsspl h1 (LH I spiral-stemmed)
- Vormthinlh1 (LH I thin-walled)
- Strelpalmlh1 (LH I palm motif)
- Klopvolulh1 (LH I volute pattern)
- Molhandlh1 (LH I high-handled cups)
- Krasundlh1 (LH I undulating bands)
- Breslightlh1 (LH I light clay)

LH II Diagnostic Features (1600-1400 BCE)

- Stradeplh2 (LH II Ephyrean goblets)
- Plozstillh2 (LH II still-life compositions)
- Krolpalmlh2 (LH II palace style)
- Zylstylh2 (LH II stylized plants)
- Vormmarinlh2 (LH II marine style)
- Strelthinlh2 (LH II thin-rimmed)
- Klopnatlh2 (LH II naturalistic)

- Molfolialh2 (LH II foliate bands)
- Krasmulilh2 (LH II multiple lines)
- Bresdenlh2 (LH II dense decoration)

LH IIIA Diagnostic Features (1400-1300 BCE)

- Stradpanlh3a (LH IIIA paneled patterns)
- Plozstdlh3a (LH IIIA standardized)
- Kroltrilh3a (LH IIIA triglyph panels)
- Zylscalh3a (LH IIIA scale pattern)
- Vormmurlh3a (LH IIIA murex pattern)
- Strelflowlh3a (LH IIIA flower motif)
- Klopstiplh3a (LH IIIA stippled)
- Molkyllh3a (LH IIIA kylix dominance)
- Krasredlh3a (LH IIIA reserved zones)
- Bresluxlh3a (LH IIIA luxury pieces)

LH IIIB Diagnostic Features (1300-1200 BCE)

- Stradformlh3b (LH IIIB formal style)
- Plozstrlh3b (LH IIIB strict conventions)
- Krolschilh3b (LH IIIB schematic)
- Zylsimplh3b (LH IIIB simplified)
- Vormbrightlh3b (LH IIIB bright paint)
- Strelquilh3b (LH IIIB quirked pattern)
- Klopbandlh3b (LH IIIB banded decoration)
- Molwhorlh3b (LH IIIB whorl shells)
- Krasfrielh3b (LH IIIB frieze pattern)

- Bresmeclh3b (LH IIIB mechanical style)

LH IIIC Diagnostic Features (1200-1050 BCE)

- Stradpiclh3c (LH IIIC pictorial style)
- Plozcloslh3c (LH IIIC close style)
- Krolgrnlh3c (LH IIIC granary style)
- Zylregionlh3c (LH IIIC regional variations)
- Vormfinalh3c (LH IIIC final decorative style)
- Strelwarriorlh3c (LH IIIC warrior vases)
- Klopbirdinlh3c (LH IIIC bird motifs)
- Moloctopuslh3c (LH IIIC octopus style)
- Krasnovelh3c (LH IIIC novel compositions)
- Bresrecurlh3c (LH IIIC recurrent patterns)

Regional Variations by Sub-Phase

Argolid Regional Sub-Phases

- Stradargei (Argolid early innovations)
- Plozargst (Argolid standard style)
- Krolargmy (Argolid Mycenae workshops)
- Zylargtr (Argolid Tiryns style)
- Vormargmd (Argolid Midea pottery)
- Strelargla (Argolid late style)
- Klopargex (Argolid export style)
- Molargpal (Argolid palatial style)
- Krasargpost (Argolid post-palatial)
- Bresargloc (Argolid local variations)

Attic Regional Sub-Phases

- Stradarath (Attic Athens style)
- Plozattel (Attic Eleusis style)
- Krolatmar (Attic Marathon style)
- Zylatbra (Attic Brauron style)
- Vormatpal (Attic palatial style)
- Strelatear (Attic early style)
- Klopatlat (Attic late style)
- Molatpost (Attic post-palatial)
- Krasatexp (Attic export style)
- Bresatcom (Attic commercial style)

Boeotian Regional Sub-Phases

- Stradboeor (Boeotian Orchomenos style)
- Plozboeth (Boeotian Thebes style)
- Krolboegl (Boeotian Gla style)
- Zylboeeu (Boeotian Eutresis style)
- Vormboepal (Boeotian palatial)
- Strelboepost (Boeotian post-palatial)
- Klopboeear (Boeotian early style)
- Molboelat (Boeotian late style)
- Krasboeloc (Boeotian local style)
- Bresboetran (Boeotian transitional)

Cretan Sub-Phases

- Stradcremin (Cretan Minoan influence)

- Plozcrekn (Cretan Knossos style)
- Krolcrekh (Cretan Khania style)
- Zylcrepal (Cretan palatial style)
- Vormcrepost (Cretan post-palatial)
- Strelcrewar (Cretan warrior style)
- Klopcreoc (Cretan octopus style)
- Molcrereg (Cretan regional style)
- Krascreexp (Cretan export style)
- Brescretra (Cretan transitional)

Transitional Characteristics Between Sub-Phases

LH I to LH II Transition

- Stradtri-ii (I-II transition elements)
- Ploztriminpal (I-II Minoan to palatial shift)
- Kroltrivolcut (I-II volute to cut-stem)
- Zyltrimardec (I-II marine decoration start)
- Vormtristylm (I-II stylization process)
- Streltrimotsub (I-II motif substitution)
- Kloptricompimpr (I-II compositional improvement)
- Moltrihandlow (I-II handle lowering)
- Krastrishapeadj (I-II shape adjustments)
- Brestritechimpr (I-II technical improvements)

LH II to LH IIIA Transition

- Stradtrii-iiia (II-IIIA transition markers)

- Ploztriapalstd (II-IIIA palatial to standardized)
- Kroltriifnap (II-IIIA naturalistic to panel)
- Zyltriimarsim (II-IIIA marine to simplified)
- Vormtriiwrkbur (II-IIIA workshop to bureaucratic)
- Streltriimotclas (II-IIIA motif classification)
- Kloptriiuniprep (II-IIIA unified preparation)
- Moltriimassstr (II-IIIA mass structured)
- Krastriifillsp (II-IIIA filling spaces)
- Brestriitechdiv (II-IIIA technical diversity)

LH IIIA to LH IIIB Transition

- Stradtriiiia-iiib (IIIA-IIIB transition)
- Ploztriiiaschsim (IIIA-IIIB schematic simplification)
- Kroltriiiareduc (IIIA-IIIB reduction of elements)
- Zyltriiiamotpro (IIIA-IIIB motif processing)
- Vormtriiiamech (IIIA-IIIB mechanical style)
- Streltriiiapanel (IIIA-IIIB panel reorganization)
- Kloptriiiabandexp (IIIA-IIIB banded expansion)
- Moltriiiashapesta (IIIA-IIIB shape standardization)
- Krastriiiamotdeg (IIIA-IIIB motif degeneration)
- Brestriiiasmalldec (IIIA-IIIB smaller decoration)

LH IIIB to LH IIIC Transition

- Stradtriiiib-iiic (IIIB-IIIC transition)
- Ploztriiibdeclin (IIIB-IIIC decline elements)

- Kroltriiibregion (IIIB-IIIC regional divergence)
- Zyltriiibreviv (IIIB-IIIC revival features)
- Vormtriiibpictori (IIIB-IIIC pictorial features)
- Streltriiibchaos (IIIB-IIIC chaotic period)
- Kloptriiibinnov (IIIB-IIIC innovation aspects)
- Moltriiibworkloc (IIIB-IIIC workshop localization)
- Krastriiibhandma (IIIB-IIIC hand-made return)
- Brestriiibfractu (IIIB-IIIC fractured tradtion)

Vessel Types by Sub-Phase

LH I Vessel Types

- Stradlhicup (LH I vapheio cup)
- Plozlhigob (LH I goblet)
- Krollhijar (LH I jar)
- Zyllhijug (LH I jug)
- Vormlhirhyt (LH I rhyton)
- Strellhiala (LH I alabastron)
- Kloplhiamp (LH I amphora)
- Mollhipyx (LH I pyxis)
- Kraslhibow (LH I bowl)
- Breslhipit (LH I pithos)

LH II Vessel Types

- Stradlhiieph (LH II ephyraean goblet)
- Plozlhiipal (LH II palace style jar)

- Krollhiimar (LH II marine style vessel)
- Zyllhiikyl (LH II kylix)
- Vormlhiistir (LH II stirrup jar)
- Strellhiikrater (LH II krater)
- Kloplhiiamp (LH II amphora)
- Mollhiialb (LH II alabastron)
- Kraslhiipyx (LH II pyxis)
- Breslhiibowl (LH II bowl)

LH IIIA Vessel Types

- Stradlhiiiakylix (LH IIIA kylix)
- Plozlhiiiastir (LH IIIA stirrup jar)
- Krollhiiiakrat (LH IIIA krater)
- Zyllhiiiapir (LH IIIA piriform jar)
- Vormlhiiiaalb (LH IIIA alabastron)
- Strellhiiiaamp (LH IIIA amphora)
- Kloplhiiiapyx (LH IIIA pyxis)
- Mollhiiiajug (LH IIIA jug)
- Kraslhiiiarhyt (LH IIIA rhyton)
- Breslhiiiabowl (LH IIIA bowl)

LH IIIB Vessel Types

- Stradlhiiibkyl (LH IIIB kylix)
- Plozlhiiibstir (LH IIIB stirrup jar)
- Krollhiiibkrat (LH IIIB krater)
- Zyllhiiibpir (LH IIIB piriform jar)

- Vormlhiiibdeep (LH IIIB deep bowl)
- Strellhiiibamp (LH IIIB amphora)
- Kloplhiiibcup (LH IIIB cup)
- Mollhiiibjug (LH IIIB jug)
- Kraslhiiibfeed (LH IIIB feeding bottle)
- Breslhiiibstan (LH IIIB stemmed bowl)

LH IIIC Vessel Types

- Stradlhiiicdeep (LH IIIC deep bowl)
- Plozlhiiicstir (LH IIIC stirrup jar)
- Krollhiiicbel (LH IIIC bellied jar)
- Zyllhiiicwar (LH IIIC warrior vase)
- Vormlhiiicpic (LH IIIC pictorial krater)
- Strellhiiicamph (LH IIIC amphora)
- Kloplhiiicfeed (LH IIIC feeding bottle)
- Mollhiiickalu (LH IIIC kalathos)
- Kraslhiiicoctop (LH IIIC octopus stirrup jar)
- Breslhiiicjug (LH IIIC jug)
